

RALPH Mc GILL

The Wonderful
U.S.A. Tourists

From a Moscow Notebook:
While waiting patiently by the Metropole Hotel Intourist service desk for an interpreter, a weary, overweight, but handsome young lady approached.
Her beatnik-type husband, who had a stubble of red beard, trailed silently along.

"I can see you are an American," she said. "Let me ask you. Have you ever rode hard train from Leningrad to Moscow?"

I said no.

"My God, what an experience.
Eight and a half hours on a polished plank seat."

"Why didn't you ride soft?"

"I don't know. They wouldn't sell us a soft ticket. I think they wanted to get rid of us. But let me tell you. I'm not worried about these people any longer.
I'd read the papers and magazines before I came and I was scared. But not any more. Inefficient! My God, what inefficiency."

High Key

Her voice rose to a higher key.
"Maybe you can save my life.
I've been in this country 14 days, and I haven't been able to get any dry vermouth to make a martini."

"No gin either," I said.

"My God," she said. "I'd use Vodka. You mean there isn't any dry vermouth in Moscow?"

"None."

"Don't worry about these people, pal," she said. "Just wait until I get home to California and tell them the facts."

The American tourists in Russia are fascinating to behold. The tourist who wants the plush resort comforts isn't, of course, going to Russia. Nor are those who go all students or beatniks. There is a new type American tourist in Russia. He is, for the most part, white-collar middle class.
One meets delegations of farmers and many small-town merchants.

One day, unable to get a taxi at Red Square, I hitch-hiked a ride with a tourist bus filled with pleasant people from Napa, California. A Methodist minister was directing them. At the American Fair I fell in with tourists who had come on a bus tour overland from Helsinki. They were teachers, a retired businessman and so, and just average couples who had saved money for "a trip" and made it Russia.

One fellow from Chicago, a plumber, had made a study of Russian baths and restrooms. He did not see too many of the historical sights but he made himself an expert on toilets and baths.
He went home with a low opinion of Soviet ability. Sputniks meant nothing to him. Their toilets aren't as good as ours.

Happiest Tourist

The happiest tourist encountered was Paul Tenenbaum of Dalton, Ga. After doing the Pacific area and Europe by ship, he had bought a small car. He had driven through Spain, Belgium, Holland, West Germany, East Germany, and on into Russia.

"Never had a greater time," he said, at breakfast in Moscow.
"I speak a little German and that gets me by. When I get into a town I ask where the dances are. I like to dance. That's the way to get to know people. If you can dance you are accepted.
Nobody has said an unpleasant word to me. In East Germany the cops stopped me but they just wanted to look at the car. I'm staying at little hotels and having a grand time. The Russians are friendly, and they get a kick out of my dancing. I wouldn't have missed doing this for all the world."

Intourist is under-staffed and has difficulty coping with Russia's newest industry—tourists.
But they try. The Intourist girls who interpret and guide are wonderful. They are well educated, trained and fully able to handle any male tourist with ideas. One young lady who interpreted for me had been sent out alone in charge of 30 Yale students, members of a visiting choir. She bought all tickets, made reservations, ordered meals and shepherded them safely on a four-weeks' tour. She was somewhat shaken by the experience, but brought it off with distinction.

It's all very educational—for Russians and visitors.

Clinkscales And Lawyer Are Indicted

Commerce—Judge Maylon B. Clinkscales of the Piedmont Circuit was indicted here Monday by the Jackson County grand jury on charges of "barratry" and "conspiracy to defraud or cheat" the county.

The jury also indicted Winder attorney Marvin Pierce on a charge of conspiracy to defraud or cheat the county.

Billy Elder, clerk of the Jackson County Superior Court, said Clinkscales was presented a copy of the charges late Monday afternoon by County Probation Officer W. A. Cooper.

He said, however, he didn't know whether Pierce had received a copy of the charges or not.

BOTH UNAVAILABLE

Clinkscales and Pierce were not available for comment.

The joint indictment against Clinkscales and Pierce concerns the sale of $150,000 in county hospital and health center bonds, for which Pierce received a $2,000 commission.

The barratry indictment grew out of Clinkscales' granting of an injunction to close the City Court of Jefferson last fall.

The closing order came after revenue agents arrested eight persons on suspicion of conducting illegal liquor operations. City Court Judge Early Stark freed the eight on writs of habeas corpus although Clinkscale had ordered them held without bond for grand jury action.

INJUNCTION GRANTED

Shortly afterward Herbert P.
Womack, then a revenue agent, obtained an injunction from Clinkscales to close operations of the City Court.

A State Supreme Court decision reopened the City Court.

The indictment's charge of con-

Legislature Defies Long and Adjourns

By HOMER BIGART
(Copyright 1959 by the New York Times Co.)

BATON ROUGE—The Louisiana Legislature, summoned to a special session by Gov. Long, rebelled Monday night and voted to go home.

Governor Long, who had prepared an address to be given at a joint session later Monday night, reached the Senate floor a few minutes after the adjournment vote.

Shuffling to the microphone,
Long who engineered his own release from a mental hospital late in June, struggled to keep his emotions under control.

"I'm not especially angry at anybody," he said. "Now ladies and gentlemen, go on home. No hard feelings. Go on home and think it over and let your conscience be your guide."

He defended the legislation he wanted this special session to adopt. But he was obviously shaken and the words lacked drive.
The packed gallery, stunned by the unexpected end of the session, could hardly follow him.

The House was in session only thirty minutes when a resolution to adjourn was voted, 66 to 23.
Representatives and spectators cheered and then hurried to the Senate chamber.

There Senator B. B. (Sixty)
Rayburn, Governor Long's floor leader, postponed a similar adjournment move by calling a recess.

But when the Senate recon-vened shortly before 6 o'clock it was obvious that the governor was defeated. Adjournment was voted 26 to 9.

Meanwhile aides went to get Governor Long.

The legislators had feared that the Governor would become uncontrollable at this session.

When he last spoke to this body on May 27 he loosed a stream of profanity and invective that shocked the gallery, a statewide TV audience and even the legislators.

"Anything can happen," said
Secretary of State Wade O. Martin Jr., as crowds started con-

Little Rock Police Map Secret Strategy to Keep Integration Orderly

2 Schools Reopening Tomorrow

By MARION GAINES
Constitution Staff Writer

LITTLE ROCK—Hard-core segregationists Monday were busily shoring up opposition to the imminent integration of public high schools here while edgy but determined city police were charting semi-secret strategy to stamp out any spark of crowd lawlessness.

Despite Police Chief Gene
Smith's brusque "no comment,"
The Constitution learned that Little Rock policemen are under orders to "brook no interference" with the orderly integration Wednesday of Central and Hall high schools.

JAIL PROMISED

A prominent business leader, who has worked closely with city officials on plans for reopening the high schools that were shut all last year by Gov. Faubus, said:

"They (the police) are not going to stand for any foolishness. They are just going to cart those people off to jail if they fail to keep moving when told to."

'A NEW CHIEF'

The businessman, who asked not to be identified, said school officials and police are determined to avoid a repetition of the disastrous 1957 school opening that finally ended in forced integration of Central High School by U.S. paratroopers ordered out by President Eisenhower.

Asked why city police believe they can succeed now where they failed two years ago, he said:
"Since then, we've changed to the city manager form of government and we've got a new police chief."

Boat Prop Kills Youth In Tift Lake

TIFTON—A 20-year-old Tifton youth was killed late Monday when he was struck on the head by the propeller of an outboard motorboat while swimming in Lake Larry, six miles south of here.

Sheriff T. C. Greer of Tift
County, said the victim, James Goodwin, was swimming with two friends about 75 yards from shore in 10 feet of water. He had dived under water, the sheriff said, and upon surfacing saw the boat, owned by Nelson Elton, approaching.

To avoid being hit, the sheriff said, Goodwin dived again, but did not go far enough below. Had he gone down just another inch, the sheriff said, he would have missed the propeller.

The body was recovered about 30 minutes later.

Goodwin was a Tifton High School graduate, and was married five months ago. He was employed at a Tifton hatchery.

He is survived by his parents,
Mr. and Mrs. J. Vincent Goodwin, and several sisters and brothers.

Lake Larry is a private lake open to the public, owned and operated by Ed Evans, the sheriff said.

Gunman Fails to Kill Raul Castro

By JOSEPH A. TAYLOR
Havana (UPI)—A gunman

tried to assassinate army commander Raul Castro at a church wedding in Havana Sunday night but was seized before he could pull the trigger of his pistol, informed sources said Monday.

The attempted assassination of Premier Fidel Castro's 28-year-old brother climaxed a weekend of violence. Landings by anti-Castro forces were reported, the government arrested more than 1,000 soldiers accused of plotting to overthrow Castro, and the premier's home was reported sprayed by bullets.

CONFIRMS ROUNDUP

The official Castro rebel newspaper Revolution, confirmed Monday that "numerous counter-revolutionary elements linked to (Dominican dictator Gen. Rafael Leonidas Trujillo and war criminals" had been seized.

It said they had been "organizing, for me a vast and criminal conspiracy against the country."

The paper denied reports that landings had occurred last weekend. Informal sources said, however, that "mercenaries" had landed by sea and air on the Isle of Pines, 56 miles south of Havana, Friday and Saturday.

Raul Castro went to La Merced Roman Catholic Church for the wedding of rebel commandant Rolando Curbela Secades, an old friend. Sources gave this ac-as saying he heard a warrant had been issued for his arrest in connection with the beating and knifing but that he "had nothing to do with it."

The victim,
Roy Fred Hill, said Evans "held a grudge against me" dating back to when Hill was a guard at the

Meanwhile, metropolitan police and sheriff's departments searched for the two escaped convicts while the victim of the beating and knifing was in hiding with his

Roy McLarty, superintendent of Cobb County detectives, said Hill's statements about the incident have been "hazy" and "incoher-

The detective chief said he was hesitant to believe parts of Hill's account because Hill said the attackers were "strong."

The General Assembly is expect-

Elliott's Labor Bill Fair, Rayburn Says

By JOSEPH A. LOFTUS
(Copyright 1959, The New York Times Co.)
WASHINGTON — House Speaker Rayburn appealed Monday night for public support of the

Elliott labor reform bill as "the road of reason and fair play." He accused "powerful interests" backing the Landrum-Griffin bill of using an anti-racketeering weapon to cripple decent unionism and alter the balance between management and labor.

Rayburn spoke over the Mutual Broadcasting System on the eve of a four- or five-day struggle in the House to write a new law governing union leaders, the internal affairs of unions, and labor-management relations.

FELLED BY SURGERY

Rep. Elliott (D-Ala.), who gave his name to the bill put together by the House Education and Labor Committee, underwent a gall bladder operation and was lost to his colleagues in the House debate.

His bill, resembling the Senate-approved bill, carries controls on the use of union funds, provides democratic procedures and protects individual union members' rights against autocratic leadership.

A coalition bill sponsored by Reps. Landrum (D-Ga.) and Griffin (R-Mich.) and supported by President Eisenhower, differs chiefly in its broader controls on secondary boycotts and picketing and its criminal penalties for interference with member's rights.

SAME BASIC WEAPONS

Rayburn said these two bills contain the same basic weapons against racketeering, and that outlawing racketeering was not the real issue.

"The fundamental difference between the two bills is the way in which they would alter the balance between management and labor," he said.

"In my opinion, the Republican-sponsored bill would throw the weight of the federal government so heavily on the side of management that it would constitute a genuine injustice to the rights of the honest, law-abiding working men and women of this country."

REASONS EXPLAINED

Rayburn said he was supporting the Elliott bill because he was convinced "it will do a thorough clean-up job, that it will stamp out racketeering, and that it will correct the worst abuses in labor-management relations without trampling on the just rights of anyone."

He called the Elliott bill "the middle road, the difficult road" designed to reform without punishing, cure without crushing.

Khrushchev Offers Atomic 'Pledge'

LONDON (UPI)—Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, in a letter made public Monday, said that Russia was prepared to give a pledge that it would halt nuclear weapons tests.

The Premier charged, however, that the United States and Britain were showing a "negative attitude" at the current three-power Geneva talks on a test ban. The Western attitude, he said, made successful conclusion of the talks "still doubtful."

Khrushchev made his remarks in a letter to the European Federation Against Nuclear Arms. It was delivered to Canon L. John Collins, vice president of the federation, and made public here.

A spokesman for the federation said it was awaiting answers to similar letters sent to the British and U.S. governments.

"The Soviet Union," Khrushchev's letter said, "is ready to accept the most solemn obligation not to be the first to conduct any further tests of nuclear weapons."

The Soviet leader recalled that on March 31, 1958, Russia called a halt to its nuclear weapons tests "in the hope that the United States and Great Britain would follow our example."

Khrushchev's letter added: "You know, however, that the governments of the United States and Great Britain not only failed to follow our example but tried to obtain the greatest possible military advantage by carrying out a series of tests unprecedented in intensity."

The deadlocked three-power nuclear talks began in Geneva last Oct. 31. The United States and Britain have been insisting that an effective inspection system be included in any nuclear test ban treaty.

Tax Boost Rejected in Road Crisis

(Copyright 1959, The New York Times Co.)
WASHINGTON — The House Ways and Means Committee rejected a new tax-increase proposal Monday in an effort to meet the financial crisis facing the interstate highway program.

The committee voted 15 to 8 against a temporary rise of one cent a gallon in the federal gasoline tax, now three cents a gallon.

Another meeting was scheduled for Tuesday, but members were not optimistic over prospects for a solution.

NO PROGRESS

"We're right back where we started—nowhere," was the comment of one member, Rep. Curtis (R-Mo.).

The administration continued to press for approval of President Eisenhower's proposal for a 1½-cent increase in the gasoline tax. Its aim is to meet a prospective five-year shortage of $4,000,000,000 in revenues earmarked for construction of the 41,000-mile interstate system.

Rep. Byrnes (R-Wis.) proposed the 1-cent increase as a stop-gap measure to produce about $1,560,000,000 in additional highway funds until July 1, 1962.

PAY-AS-BUILD

It would have permitted continuation of the program on a pay-as-you-build basis with a reduction in allocations to states from $2,500,000,000 authorized by present law to $1,500,000,000 for the year starting next July 1 and from an authorized $2,200,000,000 to $1,300,000,000 in the following year.

The federal government pays 90 per cent of interstate highway construction costs and the states 10 per cent. Federal grants of $7,715,000,000 have been made under the 1957 law.

Big 4 Set Up Panel To Map Arms Cuts

By THOMAS J. HAMILTON
(Copyright 1959 by The New York Times Co.)

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—The four big powers have decided to set up new machinery for disarmament negotiations which in effect would take over the responsibility from the U.N. Disarmament Commission.

In Geneva last week, on the last day of the foreign ministers' conference on Berlin, it was agreed to set up a 10-nation group on disarmament. Reliable sources said Monday that the group's membership, in accordance with the Soviet demand for "parity," will be divided equally between the Western and Communist powers. In addition to the United States, Britain and France, the Western side is to include Canada and Italy. The Communist side is to consist of the Soviet Union, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Albania.

KEEP U.N. LINKS

According to dependable information, the new commission or committee — its name has not been finally decided — would not be entirely independent of the United Nations. It was indicated that Secretary General Hammarskjöld would be invited to send an observer to its meetings, which may be held either at the U.N. headquarters or at the regional headquarters in Geneva.

However, it was learned that Hammarskjöld expressed concern over the plan last Wednesday, when the U.S., British and French representatives called on him separately to inform him of the great power decision.

The four-power communique issued in Geneva a week ago said the big four foreign ministers had had "useful talks" on methods of resuming disarmament negotiations. The communique said the decision would be announced after consultations with Hammarskjöld and other members of the United Nations.

PROTESTS EXPECTED

Since the group envisaged by the great powers does not include any Asian-African or Latin-American states, protests by India and other neutralist countries are expected at the 1959 session of the General Assembly.

Although the new machinery proposed by the great powers would not interfere directly with the disarmament commission, reliable sources said that they thought they would preempt its field.

From 1954 to 1957, when it held its last meeting, the commission's efforts to achieve an agreement on disarmament have been made entirely through a subcommittee

Steel Talks Near Collapse After Blast by McDonald

NEW YORK (UPI)—An angry blast by union boss David J. McDonald brought the steel wage talks to the point of collapse Monday.

Shortly after industry negotiators and the union's "second team" met in joint session here, McDonald said in Pittsburgh he was "sick of that show in New York."

The president of the United Steelworkers' Union indicated he would not return to New York until the industry gave ground on its adamant refusal to give the union's 500,000 workers a 15-cent package increase.

Industry sources here were bleakly pessimistic about chances for ending the 27-day strike that has resulted in economic losses of about 810 million dollars.

The McDonald statement could mean an end to the joint sessions that were resumed here last week after a week of inactivity.

Lightning Damage To Be Repaired

The aldermanic board's purchasing committee Monday authorized C. V. Peterson, assistant city hall superintendent, to negotiate bids to repair damage to the city hall by lightning Friday night.

The bolt ripped into the extreme top of the northwest corner of the skyscraper and damaged an area which Peterson says is "at least six feet by six feet." He urged early action to close the aperture to reduce the danger of water damage from rains.

He warned that further damage might occur if time is taken to get bids. Ald. L. O. Moseley, committee chairman, and other committeemen agreed.

Tile was strewn about the city hall lawn when employees began to arrive Saturday morning. An investigation showed the damage.

State First In Help to Disabled

Gov. Vandiver said Monday that for the fifth consecutive year the Vocational Rehabilitation Division of the State Education Department has led the nation in rehabilitation of disabled citizens.

Vandiver quoted from a telegram from Mrs. Mary E. Switzer, director of the Federal Office of Vocational Rehabilitation.

She informed the governor that in the 1958-59 fiscal year, Georgia had a record of 147 disabled persons rehabilitated per 100,000 of population.

She added that a total of 5,628 disabled persons had been rehabilitated to a productive life in Georgia and that the total was second only to Pennsylvania which had a much larger population.

The national average rehabilitation rate for the year, Mrs. Switzer said, was 43 per 100,000 of population.

Vandiver extended his congratulations to A. P. Jarrell, director of the Vocational Rehabilitation Division.

Successor to Elder

Atlanta aldermen will meet in special session Tuesday at 2 p.m. to elect Charles L. Mathews, head of the collections division of the municipal revenue collector's office, to succeed the late Riley F. Elder, municipal revenue collector.

Mayor Hartsfield confirmed weekend reports that he will nominate Mathews as Elder's successor. The veteran head of the department died last week.

The mayor said he is calling the special meeting to select Elder's successor because the city could experience some difficulty in attempting to transact its fiscal affairs if it attempted to operate without a city treasurer. Several years ago, the legislature combined the posts of treasurer and Charles Mathews, head of the collections division of the municipal revenue collector's office, to succeed the late Riley F. Elder, municipal revenue collector.

Motorcyclist Jailed After Chase at 80

A 23-year-old Atlanta motorcyclist was jailed Monday night after a police chase on the southside.

The arrested man, Clarence Edgar Smith, of 3125 Oakcliff Rd., SW, was booked on charges of speeding 80 mph in a 35-mile zone and driving without a license.

Patrolmen A. B. Lyle and T. S. Duffey said they saw Smith speeding and stopped him. Asked to hand over his driver's license, the cyclist jumped back on his motorcycle and fled, officers said.

A chase ensued. Smith was finally stopped. His motorcycle was impounded and he went to jail.

The Fashion Summit . . .

A Fashion Show is many things to many people. To a Business Tycoon, it is something he probably wouldn't attend on purpose but enjoys enormously just the same; to a starry eyed little girl, the pirouetting and posing of models holds all the magic of play-acting; to a woman of almost any age, it is a glorious arm-chair shopping binge, albeit vicariously. But to Davison's President, Mr. Joseph Ross, a truly great Fashion Show is much more. To be perfect, he believes, it must be a fast-paced show from the overture to the finale where beautiful models, stunning clothes, sumptuous music, imaginative staging and brilliant lighting come together in one superbly choreographed spectacle. Precisely this, is what Atlanta may look forward to on the evening of October 1st, when Davison's presents, at the Fox Theatre, the International Symphony Fashion Gala for the benefit of St. Philip's Cathedral Building Fund.

Paris and Rome Transplanted

For more than a year, the Fashion Gala has been dreamed about, talked about, thought about. During Mr. Ross' recent trip to Europe, all the dreams crystallized when he finalized plans to transplant French and Italian fashions to Peachtree. Down the runway at the Fox Theatre will come the most breathtaking concentration of fashions ever shown in Atlanta. The world's most gorgeous mannequins from Paris, Rome, New York and Atlanta will parade originals from the Haute Couture of France and Italy, along with line-for-line copies; originals from America's Great Designers; ready-made fashions from the U.S.A., France, Italy, Spain, Switzerland and England. Internationally famous designers Guy La Roche, of Paris; Simonetta, of Rome; and America's own Luis Estevez, will fly to Atlanta and will receive the Davison Award for Creative Contributions in the Field of Fashion.

Full Symphony Orchestra

Musical accompaniment for the show will be the full complement of the Atlanta Symphony orchestra, under the baton of Mr. Henry Sopkin. A special score, constructed for fashion show production, is being arranged by Mr. Sopkin and Mr. Ross. Every facet of the International Fashion Gala—from the placing of a rose at a neckline to spectacular staging and lighting—will be polished and perfected to shine with gem-like brilliance. All this and a heavenly door prize, too: Two Round Trip First Class Tickets via Air France from Atlanta to New York, to London, to Brussels, to Paris and return. We venture to predict that the evening of October 1st will go down in Atlanta's history as one of its most dazzling and socially important occasions. You can be there—it's as easy as this: To reserve tickets, see Davison's Iris Lee, Mezzanine, Downtown or call JA. 2-7612, Ext. 8181. Tickets also available at the Service Desk, Plaza level, Davison's Lenox Square. Price of admission is a $10 donation to St. Philip's Cathedral Building Fund. See you at the Fox Theatre, 8:30 p.m., October 1st, where you will see a new dimension in fashion shows at Davison's International Symphony Fashion Gala.

Mountain Fair Offers A Quiet Good Time

By HUNTER JAMES
Constitution Staff Writer

HIAWASSEE—The pleasure-seeking type, with money in his pockets and whisky on his breath, will be wasting his time at the Georgia Mountain Fair this week.

The fair, which opened here Monday for a six-day stand, is pitched to the home demonstration type. It comes early in the season and doesn't advertise itself with a gaudy midway.

The midway, a small one as carnivals go, is located next to the Baptist Church ground and is devoid of gambling booths, burlesque joints and brassy-mouthed barkers.

The midway—the rides and in-offensive sideshows—doesn't open until late each afternoon.

Daytime fair-goers must satisfy themselves by taking in the display booths which have been erected in the high school building.

The fair is designed to broadcast the past and invite the future.

More than two dozen counties have placed exhibits here. There are exhibits bringing back memories of grandma's parlor and others to signify modern techniques of farm management and homemaking.

In one corner of the principle exhibit hall, a converted high school gymnasium, there is a room filled with antique furniture—a spinning wheel, a feather bed with a corded bottom, an old-fashioned hutch cabinet, and hanging on the wall are strings of dried peppers and beads.

In the main part of the hall, there are 26 tables laden with fresh vegetables, jellies and canned goods, and almost as many exhibition booths along the walls.

The show will be judged by a nationally licensed flower expert.

Herbert Tabor, an original promoter of the fair and its first president, said the whole idea of the North Georgia Fair was to "show what a fine place the north Georgia mountains are to live in."

"We hold it early in the year so that we can catch a lot of vacationers who are passing through. We want those folks up North to know we do something down here besides make liquor and cut throats."

A sign over one of the exhibits tells as much about the fair as anything else:

Earth is here so kind
That just tickle her
With a hoe and she Laughs with a harvest.

Marion Couple Accused Of Inter-Racial Marriage

BUENA VISTA (AP)—Warrants charging miscegenation—intermarriage between the races—have been sworn out by a Macon man against a man and a teen-age girl in Marion County, records here show.

E. W. Perry, justice of the peace, said he issued warrants against Mary Sinns, 16, of Marion County and J. P. Hudson 34, also of Marion County. The warrants were taken out by Marvin Griner of Macon, who identified himself as a relative of the girl, according to Perry.

Perry, who is state senator for the 24th District, said the warrants were issued July 3.

Sheriff John J. McCorkle of

Marion County refused to comment on the case.

John H. Land of Columbus, solicitor general for the Chattahoochee Circuit, also refused to comment on the details of the case. But he said the matter would be presented to the grand jury during the next term of court in Marion County, probably in October.

In Georgia, miscegenation requires a felony bond, and it was understood that the girl in the case had been released on bond, although the man was still being held.

The marriage license was issued in Cusseta by the ordinary there, Mrs. E. B. Spivey.

Mrs. Spivey said the couple were complete strangers to her when she issued the license, and that the man had all the features associated with a white man—"straight nose, thin lips, straight hair." She said he was dark, but not as dark as some white men she had seen.

If she had suspected miscegenation, Mrs. Spivey said, she would not have issued the marriage license. She said she had been ordinary in Cusseta for some 20 years.

She said the girl's father was with her when her marriage license was issued.

Labor Reform Bill Debate Welcomed

Controversy over the labor reform bill will get a full public airing this week as the House of Representatives engages in what is expected to be one of the most bitter battles in years. The nation hopes that from it will come an effective measure in the best interest of labor and the general public.

Dispatches from Washington indicate that seldom have House members been subjected to such intense pressure from labor lobbyists as well as from representatives of industry. The public also is being deluged with masses of conflicting information.

The controversy, of course, began with startling disclosures by the McClellan group in the Senate of corruption and mismanagement in a number of unions. This brought on public pressure for corrective legislation. The Senate last April passed a bill sponsored by Sen. Kennedy, Massachusetts Democrat, which satisfied neither labor nor industry although it was intended as a compromise.

After several weeks of debate in the House Labor Committee, three different bills have been proposed, including one favored by President Eisenhower and sponsored by Rep. Landrum of Georgia and Rep. Griffin of Michigan. All the bills contain sections aimed at racketeering and corruption and requiring unions to make detailed financial reports. Enforcement is the big issue.

One major point of conflict is the code to protect rank-and-file union members against leadership abuses. The Landrum-Griffin bill goes much further in setting up criminal penalties for abuses of members rights and contains stronger provisions against secondary boycotts and similar practices.

Considering the public pressure for a labor reform bill, Congress almost certainly will come up with one. While nobody wants labor reduced to its relatively weak position of 30 years ago, the public is fed up with obvious corruption in union leadership and disregard of its interests and wants something done about it now. Stop-gap concessions to political pressures will not satisfy.

Mental Health Program Requires Psychiatrists

All who have made a thorough analysis of the problem are convinced that a training program for psychiatric personnel is essential if Georgia is to have an adequate mental health program.

Among the latest to testify in that connection before the Senate-House Committee on Mental Health were Dr. Bernard Holland, head of Emory University's department of psychiatry, and Dr. James McCranie, director of the department of psychiatry at the Medical College of Georgia.

A tie-in between the two institutions and the Milledgeville State Hospital, along the lines proposed by Dr. Irville MacKinnon for activation after he assumes his duties as hospital superintendent, should work to the advantage of all concerned.

Lack of psychiatric personnel in sufficient numbers is reflected in the backlog of people in Georgia, referred to in Dr. Holland's report, who need treatment for mental disorders but haven't received it. Many of them could become productive members of society if their illnesses were accorded the proper care.

Because of long years of neglect, the state practically is having to start from scratch in shaping a mental health program. Its effectiveness to a very large extent hinges on the adoption of plans whereby training of psychiatric personnel is given proper encouragement.

New Pastor Welcomed To Central Presbyterian

There is great strength in Atlanta's almost 500 churches. And among the stanchest is the Central Presbyterian, which has held forth downtown for 101 years.

For months now the church has had no regular minister as the pulpits committee searched for a successor to capable and beloved Dr. Stuart Oglesby, who retired.

This week the search came to an end, culminating in the announcement that the Central congregation has called the Rev. Fred Stair, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Hickory, N.C.

Biographical data indicate that Mr. Stair is a man of fine education and experience not only in theology and the ministry but in secular and civic affairs as well.

He's been a Junior Chamber of Commerce state director, a Community Chest director, and an Army combat team commander.

We welcome him to Central Presbyterian Church and to Atlanta.

We sympathize with the Hickory church in its loss. Any pulpit committee, Baptists, Presbyterian or otherwise, knows what those folks face when they start looking for a new preacher.

As Nixon Phrases It, What's the Alternative?

Vice President Nixon's television and press report to the nation on his journey to Russia and Poland was a part of the educational process he feels is necessary both for Americans and citizens of the U.S.S.R.

To criticism of his journey and of the projected visit by Premier Khrushchev on invitation from President Eisenhower as "political" and "hypocritical" the vice president properly said:

"My answer is, what is their alternative? The alternative is, you either talk to them or eventually you are going to fight them. And that alternative, to me, is unacceptable, not only for us, but for them and for the world generally."

"I think we should recognize the great differences that we have. I think it's essential, however, that in recognizing those differences they be discussed not by trading insults 5,000 miles apart, but that what we should do is to sit down around the conference table where we can, so that there will be no miscalculation on the part of either side as to the strength or the will that either side possesses."

As to criticism that Nixon's journey was political, the facts of it plainly controvert any such suggestion. American embassy staffs in both countries were highly gratified by Nixon's conduct and methods. Had he been merely on a political journey he could have helped himself immeasurably by demagogic attitudes, statements and arrogant defiance for the sake of politics. He did none of these. He tried as best he could to do a job for his country—for all of us. Time will tell if he had any success. But we must all keep in mind the alternative.

The alternative is war. If we do not discuss the differences we will fight about them. If they are to be discussed, then there must be actual discussions and not an exchange of letters or cablegrams.

Let us not be immature in our national attitudes. We surrender nothing in talks. As Winston Churchill once said, "Jaw, jaw, jaw is better than war, war, war."

Only the hopelessly prejudiced would regard the Nixon journey as merely political. He knows now, as he knew before he went, that the end results could harm him politically if the Khrushchev visit goes badly and relations worsen.

Good Purpose Served By Havalanta Games

The entire community wishes the Atlanta Havalanta team well as it enplanes today for Havana to compete with Cuban youths in the annual series of athletic contests.

The event, staged on a reciprocal basis between the two cities, during the past 10 years has provided educational and recreational opportunities to hundreds of participants. Both Atlanta and Havana have proved to be hospitable hosts to the occasion and the games have produced keen but friendly rivalry.

This week's visit by the 150-member Atlanta team comes at a time when there is considerable confusion in the minds of citizens throughout the United States in regard to the recent Cuban revolution and its aftermath.

It is to be hoped that the forthcoming athletic contests further the cordial relationship that always has marked the annual affair and contribute toward a better understanding here of Cuba's complex problems.

Do Fireworks Indicate Farm Boom in Atlanta?

Georgia law prohibiting the sale of fireworks except for agricultural purposes leaves a loophole large enough to throw blockbusters through without aiming in the least.

Judging from the number of fireworks exploded in thickly populated residential sections, one would think that the Atlanta urban area has been converted to farm activities with a bang.

Then there's the case of the 15-year-old from Swamp Scott, Mass., whom police said stole some money from an aunt, boarded a plane, flew to Atlanta and spent most of the remainder of his funds on fireworks he allegedly purchased at a stand near the airport.

Inasmuch as the youth apparently spent his time in the environs of the airport before being taken into custody and there are no stumps on the runways to blast, just what kind of agricultural enterprise qualified him to buy fireworks?

Atlantan Commends Appeal of President For Labor Legislation With 'Teeth' in It

Atlanta—I for one was pleased to see Eisenhower take his case for a stronger labor bill to the people. It is time for effective legislation that will put the punks in the labor movement in their place.

What man, union or non-union, can oppose the prohibitions against secondary boycotts and blackmail picketing contained in Rep. Landrum's labor bill?

James Hoffa is living proof of the dire need for a labor bill with teeth in it. The bill advanced by the House committee is worse than nothing. It would do little more than give the hoodlums in labor a new lease on life. It merely would postpone the final day of reckoning, as union leaders know full well.

No one wishes to destroy labor unions. On the contrary, they have come to be recognized as a part of the American free-enterprise society.

But labor unions, like corporations, are entitled to survive only so long as they meet the rules and regulations of the society of which they are a part, and only a part.

So let Congress get on with its work and pass a labor bill that will serve the interests of the general public, not the special interest groups.

McClain Called Right On Alcohol Problem

Atlanta—I find myself in complete agreement with Dr. Roy McClain that Jesus Christ is the cure for alcoholism. In fact Jesus is the answer to all of man's ills, problems and burdens. If alcoholism is a disease as some of you say it is, my prescription is Jesus Christ. When I gave myself to Him in complete surrender, He cured me, not a hospital, doctor or any other of your fancy man-made gadgets.

Dr. McClain is just as correct as he can be on this matter of alcoholism. Look in your Bible and you will find these words spoken by our Lord, Jesus Christ:

Improved Soviet Mind Is Challenge to United States

The Soviet Union, in the smallest backwash of a vast land, gives children allowances to go to school. Even children of the poorest Russian may go to school this way, supporting their families with government allowances instead of muscle.

This is the wisest course the Soviets could take. If we are ever subjugated by communism, our defeat will come not through force of arms (though we must protect ourselves against the remote chance it may) but from the sheer weight of an improved Soviet mind.

Educated people can move faster than the uneducated; they can adjust more easily; they understand the problems they face and are better equipped to cope with them. Education, and even more an appreciation for the value of education, form the entire basis for the advancement of a people on every level—social, economic and governmental.

The children of the ignorant remain ignorant because the people they admire, their parents, care nothing for education. The children of the poorly housed seek no better dwelling. The children of those who consider only material things important perpetuate that attitude and deny themselves spiritual and intellectual progress, such as libraries and museums.

"Come unto me ye who labor and are heavy-laden and I will give you rest."

'Let's Spend More On State Hospital'

Decatur—It is so gratifying to know that Gov. Vandiver and his wife have taken interest in Milledgeville State Hospital, have visited it and seen with their own eyes the shameful health conditions there.

It is surprising that such a deplorable condition has been permitted to exist and that such a large and important state institution has been neglected all these years. Millions of dollars are spent for various public functions. Let some of these millions pour into the fund reservoir necessary for the care of our physically and mentally sick.

Two All-Star Games Called Unnecessary

Marionetta—Sam Burke, secretary of the Georgia High School Athletic Assn., was quoted in a story in The Constitution as saying two all-star prep football games would "give more boys from these (A, B and C) classifications a chance to play."

The Burke statement was in support of the coaches' proposed plan for all-star games by brackets.

If Mr. Burke will refer to Paul Atkinson's story on the 1959 all-star game—same paper, same page—he'll see that a boy named Dan Davis from Screven County, a Class A school, was given at least half a chance to play at Grant Field last Thursday night.

I say leave the game as it is. The athletes from the smaller schools can hold their own with those from the big ones.

An "all-star" is an all-star only when he is selected from the entire field.

Basketball in Georgia would profit by playing the state championship across the board.

If classification had been in effect, David would not have been matched against Goliath.

You Get a Lift For a Penny

Comes now the toll elevator. Not here, but in Prague. If you are a tenant, you get a key which lets you ride free.

If you are a visitor to the building, they'll take you up for a penny. That is, you put one in a slot. So if the toll lift invades America, there is bound to be a man named Charley who has no penny for the ride down, so he is stuck on the top of a tall building and his wife has to carry sandwiches to him. And a young friend wants to know, when Charley's wife handed him that sandwich, why didn't she hide a nickel in it so he could get off the M.T.A.?

And did you notice that the tune is the same as "The Wreck of the 97?"

NEXT TO HEAVEN: Wm. M. Towles of Jackson, Ga., is a man who goes for steam.

Bill Towles has written to Gordon Price, at Southeastern Underwriters, endorsing the rail fare trip for Sept. 19 and asking why the engine Maude can't be reconditioned for service on a line like North Carolina's Tweetsie.

He says, "I ran Maude off the turntable pit (accident) 45 years ago. She was very old then."

"Think what it would mean," the old-timer at Jackson continues, "one of these old girls ambling around the mountain. The music of the old chime whistle echoing through the hills and an opportunity for the youngsters to hear the music of a 'hooked-up' exhaust. They could easily be converted to oil or gas and could pull open flat cars with seats for sightseeing..."

"Maybe I'm nuts, but I know one thing, I would be as near heaven as I could get here on earth if I could just pull a throttle, whistle cord and Johnson bar on one of those old girls just once."

When Mr. Towles wrote that, he didn't know about Tweetsie and 5,000 paying passengers on Sunday.

Not Maude nor the Texas nor the General necessarily—that might not be practical—but there are other engines nearby.

I hope we'll be hearing from them "hooked-up" exhausts. By the way, what is a hooked-up exhaust, anyhow?

This Old Prayer Is Still Applicable

I want to share with you a little prayer which has been passed along to me. It was written, perhaps for personal devotions, by a Christian living in the fourth century. "May I be no man's enemy, and may I be the friend of that which is eternal and abides."

"May I never quarrel with those nearest me; and if I do may I be reconciled quickly. May I never devise evil against any man. May I love, seek and attain only that which is good. May I wish for all men's happiness and envy none. May I never rejoice in the ill fortune of one who has wronged me. When I have done or said what is wrong, may I never wait the rebuke of others but always rebuke myself until I make amends. May I win no victory that harms either me or my opponent. May I reconcile friends who are at enmity with one another."

"May I, to the extent of my power, give all needful help to my friends and to all who are in want. May I never fail a friend in danger. When visiting those in grief, may I be able by gentle and healing words to soften their pain. May I respect myself. May I always keep tame that which rages within me. May I accustom myself to be gentle and never be angry with people because of circumstances. May I never discuss who is wicked and what wicked things he has done but know good men and follow their footsteps."

These words, speaking across more than 1,500 years, minister to us in several ways. First, they help us to realize that some of the concerns which continually are upon the hearts of modern-day Christians were in the hearts of Christians long ago.

Second, this prayer tells us that the problems we face are problems which other people faced also. We may well wonder why some of these problems could not have been solved by the fervent prayers and consecrated lives of millions of faithful people. But perhaps it would be better for us to recognize that good people, through their prayers and through lives motivated by prayer, have restrained the forward movement of evil. We are not engulfed in wickedness. There is much that makes life livable and there are many evidences of goodness.

Third, this ancient petition shows that Christian people long ago were concerned not only with the preservation of their individual souls but with human relationships. Christianity's answer to the problems of life has been through the genuine response of people to the welfare of other people.

Prayer always is a mirror of life. Were we to repeat this prayer morning and night our lives would reflect Christ's love.

Showdown Nears For Jack, Hubert

WASHINGTON—"Jack and Hubert" are forcing so fast a pace in the wide-open race for the 1960 Democratic presidential nomination that the next month may bring a fateful showdown between them. "Jack" is Sen. John Kennedy of Massachusetts, and "Hubert" is Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota. They are turning westward for a confrontation at the end of September. This will find them crossing trails in Wisconsin.

The risks, however, will be far from even. "Hubert" has everything to lose and "Jack" only some things. Humphrey's whole strategy is one of shooting the works. He has long been aware that his candidacy cannot even get off the ground unless he can first show great strength in his home region of the upper Middle West.

Specifically, this means Wisconsin, for Wisconsin next April will have an early and a critical presidential primary.

Kennedy may or may not enter that primary, for it is not clearly so vital to him as it is to Humphrey. And this coming month may determine whether he really needs to enter anyhow. For even apart from the fact that Kennedy now appears to be the front-runner among the Democrats, Humphrey has just been hit a hard blow in his own Midwest bailiwick.

A neighboring senator from Wisconsin itself, William Proxmire, has done a most unneighborly act. He has released a Wisconsin poll which, he says, gave Kennedy 42.5 per cent of the Democratic vote against a mere 17.3 for Humphrey. Close examination of the Proxmire figures makes things look far less bad for Humphrey. For Adlai Stevenson—who has no intention of getting into the Wisconsin action and probably no intention to contest for nomination openly anywhere—got 29.5 per cent in the Proxmire poll.

Though Humphrey is vastly more liberal than Stevenson, it is generally accepted that many of the poll votes that went to Stevenson would have gone to Humphrey had those who voted known for sure that Stevenson would never be in the Wisconsin picture.

So the Humphrey people are moving quickly to repair the prestige damage—while in private they make comments about Proxmire which his loved ones would not like. They have set for Sept. 19 in Milwaukee a "state-wide organization convention for Humphrey himself to arrive in the state on Sept. 25 for one of those tireless dawn-to-dusk, whirlwind speaking and hand-shaking tours at which he is a master.

The Humphrey people hope that with all this they will be able to demonstrate that their man has much more strength in Wisconsin than Proxmire's poll would indicate. They hope, too, that by that time Stevenson will have made some sign—say, in a Sept. 23 "nonpolitical" speech he is to make in Madison, Wis.—that will help clear the air a bit.

Visitors to Miami Bring Go-Go Pep

Exactly why all my ordinarily more or less sensible out-of-town friends assume that living in Miami has turned me into the last of the big spenders, I do not know. Nor can I decipher why they keep getting me mistook for a boulevardier de luxe and playboy, senior grade. It must be the salt air. Anyhow, it happened again.

I was seated at home in my usual luxurious surroundings puffing contemplatively at the hooka, removing bubble gum with which one of the kids had decorated the cat and peering bleakly through my migraine at a Porky Pig cartoon seemingly photographed by Mathew Brady.

The phone rang. Tidings. Old Buddy types were in town. Come to their hotel for a drink? Agreed.

At their hotel room they yanked me in.

"Here's Old Keasler!" said Old Buddy One, snapping his fingers rascally. "He'll know!"

"Yehhhhh," breathed Old Buddy Two, polishing his chicken inspector badge. "Say, Old Buddy, give a rukdown; where can us sports go for a real night on the town?"

Something happens the minute they get into Dade County: Elves with wands are stationed up the Trail somewhere, turning visitors into go-go-goers.

"He's thinking!" said O. B. 1. "Yehhhhhhh." said O. B. 2.

How could I confess that as a sybarite I was so square I had sharp corners?

"Er," I said, "Uh—well, there's lots of places. Lots of places."

(The zoo, Darby O'Gill and the Little People: No, no, but with four kids, you get sort of limited.)

"I'll just bet there are!" said one of those no-limit players, whose wife back home calls him to supper with a dog whistle. "Old Keasler knows, that's what I said."

Their pleading little eyes looked at me out of their pointy little heads. I feigned further thought, crouching down behind the high-ball glass.

"Well," they said, "just give us the name of a real hotsy-totsy floor show, eh, to start with?"

I named a swank beach joint I vaguely remembered from the Yellow Pages and away they went with glad cries of I-Love-My-Wife-But-Oh-You-Kid.

When last heard of, I understand they were hitchhiking north wearing off-the-shoulder barrels and my conscience hurt a trifle, but not much.

For who has the courage to confess to being a lousy libertine? Certainly not I.

Teachers Staying On Jobs, Frick Says

By HERMAN HANCOCK

Atlanta teachers are remaining at their jobs better this year than in former years despite uncertainties about the integration problem, Glenn Frick, member of the Atlanta Board of Education, told his colleagues Monday night.

Frick quoted statistics in answer to assertions last week by Dr. Warren Gauerke, professor of education administration at Emory University, that 30 per cent of the teachers at Sylvan High School had left their teaching posts because of uncertainties.

Dr. Gauerke said late Monday night that he had "never attributed the exodus of Atlanta school teachers to uncertainties engendered by the integration problem."

He added he had no way to determine why any teacher left employment in the city schools, but added he had contacts with local schools to support his contention that around 30 per cent of the teachers left Sylvan High School. He attributed injection of the integration issue into the controversy to "overzealous reporting."

Frick said, "I am not saying teachers are not concerned about the matter. Some folks outside the system are doing a lot of talking."

CITES FIGURES

"It is not my purpose to get into an argument with anyone, but some people have been making statements for publicity. There was talk that 15 Sylvan High School teachers had left the system because of the integration problem."

"The facts are that from April through August during the 1957-58 school year, we elected 232 teachers and had 204 resignations for various purposes. For the same period for the 1958-59 school year we elected 374 teachers and had only 184 resignations, 20 fewer than the previous period."

"I am happy to report that every teaching position in Atlanta schools is filled with a teacher having an A.B. degree or better. And I am not satisfied that our teachers think Atlanta schools are sinking ships, which they must desert."

REITERATES STATEMENT

"Now there was talk about 30 per cent of the faculty of Sylvan Hills High School leaving because of the problem. The facts are that 15 have left for various reasons. One was elected principal, three were transferred to other schools in the system, two took maternity leaves, one entered religious work, five left the city (two married and three accepted posts in other systems), one took a disability pension, the husband of one completed his studies and the couple left town, and the husband of one entered a seminary outside Atlanta, but none assigned the integration problem as the cause for leaving."

Dr. Gauerke delivered his address at a meeting of the DeKalb County League of Women Voters, and when school administrative officials said figures did not substantiate the conclusion, he reiterated the charge that uncertainty had brought the resignations.

Dr. Gauerke is scheduled to accept a post at Wayne State University, Detroit, this fall.

Pilot Life Gets Pupil Insurance In City Schools

The Atlanta Board of Education Monday night awarded a group accident insurance contract for pupils to Pilot Life Insurance Co. at a cost of $2 per year per student.

Death benefits to students and others participating would be $1,500. The maximum for medical and dental expenses was set at $3,000. Maximums of $7,500 would be paid for loss of both hands or both feet, one hand or one foot, one eye and one hand or one foot or both eyes; $3,500 for the loss of one hand or one foot, and $1,000 for the loss of one eye.

The board also agreed to pay up to $15,000 for 3.58 acres of land adjoining the Rockdale school, and up to $30,000 for another five-acre school site in the Rockdale urban renewal project.

"There is no doubt that someone cut and beat him," said McLarty, "but who did it is the question at hand."

Hill identified his attackers as Evans and the two escapees.

The State Patrol broadcast a pickup order for two other men who Supt. McLarty said were believed traveling with the escaped convicts.

The two are James Wilbanks, 27, and Ray Lankster, 25, who both have served time at the Cobb Prison Farm.

The escapees are Jerry Eugene Nutter, 20, and Eldridge Beshers, 19, who fled Fulton County's Bellwood Prison Camp last week. They are described by J. B. Hatchett, assistant director of the State Corrections Department, as "tough as a wounded rattlesnake."

Cobb County police said Hill accused Nutter, Beshers and Evans of starting a campaign to terrorize him Friday night. Hill was quoted as saying they came by his home near Acworth Friday night, threatened him and returned Sunday to beat and knife him.

labor bill of which Landrum is co-author.

Over the weekend, Rep. Mitchell said he opposed the Landrum measure, preferring something more along the lines of legislation proposed by Sen. McClelland of Arkansas.

Back in his office Monday, Vandiver immediately got the obvious question of whether he stands with Landrum or with Mitchell.

"That's a matter that addresses itself to the congressional delegation," the governor said. "It's federal legislation. I have no comment on it."

On other topics during a full, first-day-back news conference Monday, Vandiver said he observed at the governor's party that most state chief executives seem to want to "return to constitutional government."

Their respective local political pressures keep many of them from speaking out for going back to such government, however, he added.

On national politics, Vandiver said he got the feeling at the conferences that no Democrat is going to win the presidential nomination on the first ballot.

Little Rock Ready To Nip Violence

Kansas capital seems to be that Central High will be integrated (with one Negro) and Hall High (with three) Wednesday with little or no trouble—and if there is any trouble, it won't be nearly as severe as the nightmarish events of 1957.

Segregationists, meanwhile, were stirring up 11th-hour resistance on two fronts:

1. A mass rally was called for 11 a.m. (Atlanta time) Wednesday on the grounds of the state capitol by Mrs. Margaret C. Jackson, president of the Central High Mothers League.

2. A "buyers strike" against Main street merchants was called by Amis Guthridge, of the Capital Citizens Council, who handed out a "black list" of merchants he said were soft on segregation.

Although a number of persons close to the school issue were queried, Mrs. Jackson alone told the Constitution she believes the situation is potentially more explosive than two years ago.

"Looks to me like feeling is running higher," she said. "People are pretty bitter."

The scheduled demonstration at the capitol will coincide with the desegregation of Hall High in plush Pulaski Heights, a silk-stocking residential area on Little Rock's west side where opposition to Faubus has been most vigorous.

"We're going to pay tribute to the governor," Mrs. Jackson said. "We're going to tell him we need him and want his continuous leadership in our fight against federal dictatorship."

Central High is scheduled to be integrated by only one of the three Negroes assigned there recently by the school board under a pupil placement law that is now being contested in the federal courts by the NAACP.

Mrs. Daisy Bates, Arkansas head of the NAACP, said only senior-to-be Jefferson Thomas, 16—one of the original "Little Rock Nine"—will enter Central High.

Carlotta Walls is still attending summer school in Chicago, she said, and Elizabeth Eckford has compiled enough credits to graduate.

Only a dozen blocks away from Central High, the unpredictable Orval Faubus sat silently in his capitol office Monday.

Executive aide Rolla Fitch said Faubus is keeping tabs on the "hour-by-hour situation" and may call a press conference Tuesday morning to speak his mind.

One segregation outfit gave up the ghost Monday.

verging on the skyscraper-capitol late Monday.

"I don't think Earl's any crazier now than when he was elected in 1956," said Secretary Martin, who had fallen out with the Governor. "He was irresponsible, a dictator, a mean and vindictive individual three years ago and he's just the same now except he's had more to drink."

But late Monday afternoon it was still felt that Gov. Long continued to hold a tight grip on the legislature. It was explained that the entire membership was up for reelection next year and did not dare risk his displeasure now.

Secretary Martin predicted "if the Governor is calm, rational and sober, the chances are that he will have a majority that will do almost everything he wants."

"If he gets excited from temper or drinking, the legislature will want to avoid any further display and will vote for adjournment."

Jet Overdue On Dixie Flight Is Feared Down

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A Navy T33 jet was reported long overdue Monday night on a flight from Norfolk Naval Air Station, Va., to Craig Air Force Base at Selma, Ala.

An Air Force spokesman at nearby Maxwell AFB said the plane, with only the pilot aboard, was due to arrive at Craig at 9 a.m. and was presumed down. It had not been heard from since takeoff.

The spokesman said the 14th Air Force at Warner Robins AFB handles all search-rescue operations in this area.

WHAT ARE THE SECRETS OF LONG LIFE?

Here are some startling facts from the first survey of its kind in medical history

WHAT is the secret of a long, healthy life? Is it heredity? Climate? Exercise? The kind of job you have? The kind of food you eat?

To find the answers to these questions, The Saturday Evening Post commissioned the Gallup Poll to conduct a survey of people over 95—the first survey of its kind in medical history. A cross section of 402 oldsters was carefully selected. Each person was asked 221 questions. Over five months were spent on the questioning. And now—in this week's Post—you'll read the fascinating (and sometimes startling!) results of this unique poll. You'll learn:

- how tobacco and alcohol affect the length of your life.
- about the connection between the food you eat—and the number of years you live.
- how the survey altered the myth about the importance of heredity.
- about the one word—more than any other—that is the key to long life.

You won't want to miss this intriguing report—"The Secrets of Long Life"—starting in this week's Post.

Cleared in Killing, Ex-Grid Star Dies

HAMDEN, Conn. (AP)—Joseph P. Crowley, 49, who recently was cleared of killing his brother-in-law, was found dead Monday. The coroner said he may have been killed by barbiturate poisoning.

Coroner James Corrigan said an autopsy's findings indicated poisoning by barbituric acid, but he said, "It's too early to make a definite finding."

It was a startling climax to the tragedy that revolved for more than a year about the businessman and ex-Yale football star.

Klan Boss Quits In Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—The leader of the Arkansas Ku Klux Klan said Monday he was quitting the Klan.

A. C. Hightower, a Little Rock barber shop owner, has reigned as grand dragon of the U. S. Klan, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, since he chartered that organization to do business in Arkansas last June 5.

Jones Jr., 45, was killed in May 1958 in a hotel room in Tokyo. Crowley was accused of killing Jones—his wife's brother—in a drunken brawl.

But a three-judge Tokyo District Court cleared Crowley last June 22. He flew home, speaking optimistically to the press about his future.

His fully clothed body was found lying across a bed in his bedroom at the substantial Crowley home.

A son, Joseph D. Crowley, found the body. Crowley's family was staying at a summer home in Madison, Conn.

The family was quoted by police as saying he had spent the weekend here to keep some engagements. Police said he had not been seen by his family since Friday night.

His family pictured him as being in good spirits.

Authorities said he had been dead for 16 to 20 hours.

Paris Grabs 2 in Theft Of a Million

PARIS (AP)—French judicial authorities said Monday they have recovered about $200,000 from an alleged embezzlement of around a million dollars from the Paris branch of the American Express Agency.

Martin Allen, 33, an American citizen, has been charged with fraudulent misuse of funds. Allen was chief cashier at the Paris office of American Express. Renato Grassi, 36, an Italian, was charged with complicity. Grassi was reported to be a close friend of Allen and a client of American Express.

LIVES IN PARIS

Police refused to give any details of Allen's background or his address in Paris or the United States. The police report said, however, that he was born in Philadelphia. Friends said he listed Ambler, Pa., as his home. He had lived in Paris for at least eight years.

George Shirey, Paris manager for American Express, refused to make any statement about the affair.

QUESTIONED 48 HOURS

Police questioned the two men for 48 hours before turning them over to the judicial authorities. In the latter stages of the questioning, Grassi was reported by judicial authorities to have given an indication of the location of about 100 million francs—$200,000—that had not yet been spent.

Investigation of the case is expected to go on for months. The examining magistrate—sort of a one-man grand jury—is not expected to start work on the case until he gets a report from the company on the exact amount of the missing funds.

Herter Off For Candid Chile Talks

Hopes to Soothe Caribbean Unrest

(Copyright 1959, The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Herter left Monday for Santiago, Chile, with the expressed hope that a special inter-American conference of foreign ministers would help ease political tensions in the Caribbean.

In a statement issued prior to his departure by jet transport for South America, Herter called for "candid examination" of the "political tensions" that have developed in the Caribbean area and agreement on measures to deal with the troubles between the Caribbean nations.

The meeting of the foreign ministers of the 21 American republics—the first of its kind ever called by the Organization of American States—opens in Santiago on Wednesday.

SEVERAL INVASIONS

The conference, which will open against a backdrop of new political unrest in Cuba, was called after a series of invasions were attempted or threatened this spring in the Caribbean area. Two invasions, staged in Cuba, were made against the Dominican Republic in June. There also have been rebel attacks, assisted by other Caribbean nations, against Nicaragua and Panama.

The conference will consider two principal problems—political unrest in the Caribbean and "effective exercise of representative democracy" in the Western Hemisphere.

NO SPECIFIC PLANS

In his departure statement, Herter offered no specific proposals on how the United States intends to deal with these deep-seated and historic problems in Latin America. Rather his statement was one of generalities extolling the principles and responsibilities that have developed within the inter-American community over the past half century for achieving security and peace in the Western Hemisphere.

Herter noted that "over the past several months we have been increasingly concerned with the political tensions which have been developing in the Caribbean area."

"By a candid examination of these tensions and the adoption of mutually agreed measures for dealing with them on the basis of these principles and responsibilities, the meeting of foreign ministers will fulfill the aspirations of our peoples," he said.

Ike Sets Up Shop In Gettysburg Hotel

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)—President Eisenhower, wearing one golf shoe and one street shoe, went to the Hotel Gettysburg Monday and set up a temporary White House.

Going directly to the hotel after playing 18 holes of golf, Eisenhower didn't notice he still was wearing a golf shoe until he walked into the lobby.

A Secret Service agent hurried to the presidential car to fetch the other street shoe.

Eisenhower's arrival at the hotel caught Gettysburg by surprise. Only a handful of people saw him enter. The word he was there spread quickly and a large crowd, including many tourists, gathered outside. When he left 30 minutes later he got a big cheer.

Eisenhower's arrival at the hotel was the first indication he planned to set up an office outside his farm for his stay here.

The President, who has been at his farm since Friday, flew back to Washington Monday afternoon to keep some appointments. But he will return Tuesday for what may be a prolonged stay.

He hopes to get in as much golf and rest as official business permits before leaving Aug. 26 for a series of conferences in the Western Hemisphere. These conferences are a prelude to the Sept. 15 visit to Washington of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

Senate Unit Votes Vets Pension Boost

By C. P. TRUSSELL

(Copyright 1959 by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON—The Senate Finance Committee approved Monday legislation to provide liberalized pensions for veterans of World War II and the Korean war whose disabilities were not service connected. It scaled down somewhat the benefits approved by the House June 15.

Cost of the program, due for almost certain passage before Congress adjourns its first session, defied even speculation. In the House-approved version, the extra cost of veterans' pension programs would reach $12,000,000,000 in 40 years. Under the Senate committee versions the cost would be lowered, but by how much had not been figured out.

Sen. Byrd (D-Va.), finance committee chairman, and Senate economy leader, said that the panel was not working on 40-year estimates, producing astronomical figures, but was concentrating upon the present impacts and those of the foreseeable future. In 40 years, he said, the pension provisions of the veterans' law would be revised perhaps a dozen times. Thus, he held, two-generation estimates now could not present an accurate picture. The House and the Senate committee have sought to equalize pension programs as they affected veterans of World War II, World War I and the Korean War.

Special attention was given to equalize the status of widows and children of veterans of World War II and the Korean War with those of World War I.

Mrs. Burton Given Delay Of Few Days

The date for an extradition hearing for Mrs. Margaret Burton was set and later cancelled Monday because of a question over official papers.

Henry Neal, the assistant attorney general assigned to the governor's office who will conduct the hearing, scheduled it for Aug. 27. Later in the day, however, he said it would be "delayed a few days." Neal said in reading over the extradition papers from California he discovered they were not in proper form and sent them back for "minor corrections."

Neal said the papers likely will be back "by the end of the week," but that the hearing will be delayed for a few days.

Mrs. Burton—known here as Mrs. Janet Gray, a Decatur socialite, until she was apprehended and charged with larceny of more than $180,000 from the private medical clinic where she was employed—is being held in Fulton Tower on a detainer from California. She was released from Georgia State Prison last week.

A British subject, she is also under a federal deportation order which, presumably, will be executed following a disposition of the California case.

GEORGIA NEWS ROUNDUP

Anjette Reprieved, Returned to Macon

State prison officials late Monday ordered Mrs. Anjette Donovan Lyles returned to a Macon jail cell from death row at Georgia State Prison at Reidsville.

Gov. Vandiver, earlier in the day, had granted a reprieve from her Aug. 17 death sentence to allow the Pardons and Paroles Board to consider her appeal for a commuted sentence.

The board had joined Mrs. Lyles' attorney in requesting the reprieve. The attorneys who successfully prosecuted her for the anti-poison murder of her 9-year-old daughter offered no objection to the delay.

Vandiver stayed the execution for 60 days. Her attorneys had asked for 90.

Meanwhile, William Kimbrough, chairman of the Pardons and Paroles Board scheduled a hearing on Mrs. Lyles' plea that her sentence be changed from death in the electric chair to life in prison for Tuesday, September 22 at 10 a.m.

Only the Pardons and Paroles Board can reduce Mrs. Lyles' sentence from death to life imprisonment. The governor may only delay the date for execution.

Still Missing

A team of rescuers with bloodhounds Monday failed to find any trace of a 32-year-old Cook County man, who disappeared from his home last Tuesday. He is believed to be a victim of amnesia.

I. J. Howell left home on foot Tuesday night after complaining to his wife about a severe headache, Sheriff C. A. Vittum said.

Howell was missing for 28 hours when he suffered an amnesia attack last October. He recovered and returned home after wandering around in the Bush Creek area.

Ringgold TVA Bid

Signing of the Tennessee Valley Authority self-financing bill by President Eisenhower has officials of Catoosa County in Ringgold moving swiftly to resume negotiations for TVA power.

Mayor Marvin F. Partin, saying "our aim is to get cheaper electric power," quoted TVA power director G. O. Wessenaue as saying Sunday that TVA would give "immediate attention" to a formal request by the Ringgold City Council for service.

The new law affecting TVA limits the agency to a certain area for supplying electricity, a point fought for by private power companies. In the allowable area is Ringgold, in Georgia just across the Tennessee line.

The escapee, Franklin D. Smith, 21, was reported seen walking on the South Expressway. Police squad cars moved into the area but did not find Smith.

Smith escaped Monday afternoon from a work detail on P. A. road near the Henry County line in east Clayton County. He was an inmate of the Clayton prison camp near Jonesboro.

Smith was sentenced July 9 in Fulton County to serve two consecutive two-year terms for burglary and automobile larceny.

Mad Rush Muffed Nixon's TV Show

By PAUL JONES

Television has muffed one of the big stories of the year.

In a mad scramble to be first on the air with the story of Vice President Nixon's visit to Russia and Poland, two of the major networks failed to take full advantage of one of the most interesting programs of the season.

NBC-TV originally had scheduled its telecast of the Nixon story—30 minutes of film with commentary by Mr. Nixon and TV newsman Ray Scherer—for Tuesday at 9 p.m. If NBC-TV had followed this schedule newspapers and TV stations might have had time to inform the public of the important event.

But it seems that CBS-TV tried to jump the gun and present the same show on Sunday night in a time period not normally reserved for the best in TV programming. NBC-TV then showed its Nixon story up to Sunday night to meet the competition. Both networks did their Nixon stories, one following the other. Both were informative and entertaining.

I am certain, however, that had the chiefs of the two networks agreed to hold up on the films until the public had been informed of the impending showings, a far greater audience would have seen both shows. Newspapers had covered the Nixon story in great detail. The story of the trip had lost some of its immediate news value by the time the films had been processed and made available for showings on TV.

But the films with Mr. Nixon's commentary and his concluding remarks in which he attempted to analyze how his visit had affected U.S.-Soviet relations were of vital importance in helping to make our people better informed on foreign relations.

An industry which has long been criticized because it has allowed such public service programs as Omnibus and Voice of Firestone to die while, at the same time it has promoted second-rate drama and quiz shows, could have done itself a lot of good by dedicating the Nixon story to the public interest, and forgetting, for once, a selfish desire to be first.

Considering the importance of Mr. Nixon's trip to Russia and Poland I feel the public should have another opportunity to see these films at a time more appropriate for an event of this type.

IT IS SURPRISING how the absence of one member of a panel can affect the outcome of a show. The best example of this, I think, is the way To Tell the Truth has bounced back since Polly Bergen has been back in her regular position.

While Polly was gone the show lost some of its sparkle. She seems to have so much fun herself participating in the show that her charm captivates the entire TV audience. It's good to have her back.

On the other hand, I wish they'd get rid of that fellow Tom Poston who sits at the other end of the table on this show. Poston's comments which are supposed to be funny have hurt an otherwise good show.

LETTERS

SUSAN AIKMAN, of Marietta, writes: "On Bandstand (Monday, Aug. 3) Dick Clark was talking about the way a girl was laughing and he said 'Pat (Molittieri) used to stand there and laugh like that sometimes.' He then said he was just thinking about the good old times. I read Pat's article in Teen Magazine. It is very good. . . ."

Yes, Susan, I'm sure Dick Clark will be thinking more and more about the good old days. I'm sure he would like to return to the days when Pat, Justine and Bob were regulars on the show.

MRS. W. F. HEFNER, of Macon, writes: "Please, do you know the name of the man who played the lead on Armstrong Circle Theater about two weeks ago? I don't know the name of the play but it was about a compulsive gambler. It was a repeat."

You bet I do. Simon Oakland played the part.

KAY RICHARDS, of Whitesburg, writes: "How can I get a picture of Cindy Robbins? Is it true that she is the new girl friend of Edd Byrnes? Who does Annette Funicello go with?"

Write Cindy at the Hotel Barbizon, New York City. I think Cindy and Edd have been seen together. I don't know who Annette is dating. But I'll check.

To Tell The Truth Panel Back

8:30-9 (Ch. 5)—The most interesting of the three spots on To Tell the Truth tonight will have three ladies, who all claim to love being fenced in. Puzzling over this and the other groups of liars will be the regular panel, back together again—Polly Bergen, Kitty Carlisle, Tom Poston and Don Ameche.

8:30-9 (Ch. 2)—The Jimmie Rodgers Show (and Jimmie is back in saddle shoes this week; as the clothing experiments continue) will have two name guests and one particularly interesting new guest. The rookie is a fine vocal group, The Brothers Four, boys who met in college and are fraternity, not blood, brothers. Tony Bennett and Carol Hughes are the others. The big item here is a tricky melody in which every body sings songs associated with somebody else—Tony and Jimmie trade salutes on "Because of You" and "Oh, Oh, I'm Falling In Love Again," and The Brothers Four have a great version of Tony's "In the Middle of

An Island. Frank Gallop adds his voice over this melody, too. There's a good finale, with Tony and Jimmie working over "That Great Getting-Up Morning."

9:30 (Ch. 5)—The Geritol Adventure Showcase is a four-week stopgap operation until it's time for a new series in the fall. All four will be pilot films of series which didn't make it. Tonight's is "Brock Callahan," a film made 18 months ago. It stars Ken Clark as a private eye who used to be a professional football player. His case: the murder of a decorator found dangling like a mo-

Bellamy To Star as Jefferson

By VAL ADAMS

(Copyright 1959, The New York Times Co.) NEW YORK—Ralph Bellamy, who portrayed Franklin D. Roosevelt in "Sunrise at Campobello" on the Broadway stage, will star as Thomas Jefferson in a television drama titled "Divided We Stand," on NBC-TV.

The drama, now being written by Morton Wisengrad, will be based upon a conflict of ideas between Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton that led to the birth of the two-party political system in this country. Arthur Kennedy will portray Hamilton.

The Miss America contest in Atlantic City next month will provide the Columbia Broadcasting System with two television shows instead of the usual one. The additional show is the Miss America Pageant Parade, which will be presented on Sept. 8 from 8 to 8:30 p.m. Ceremonies marking the selection of Miss America herself will be televised on Sept. 12 from 10 p.m. to midnight.

NBC-TV's Sunday Showcase has assigned Gore Vidal to write a drama based upon the life of his grandfather, the late Thomas Gore of Oklahoma, who was the only blind senator ever elected to the State Legislature. The playwright will appear on the program as narrator.

Hennings Threatens To Call Rights Bill

Angered by Southern Delays In House, Senate Committees

By ALBERT RILEY

WASHINGTON—Angered by Southern delaying tactics in Senate and House committees, Sen. Hennings (D-Mo) threatened Monday to call up a civil rights bill on the Senate floor as an amendment to some other legislation already on the calendar.

"There is no indication whatsoever that the House of Representatives will pass civil rights legislation this year," Hennings declared.

Therefore, Hennings said, talk of bypassing the Senate Judiciary Committee by taking up a House bill "continues to be altogether premature."

Southerners in the Senate committee are "absolute and unmitigated in their determination to talk this legislation to death," Hennings added, as he voiced doubt that a bill can be reported out of the committee.

"LAST RESORT" TACTIC

As a "last resort," the Missouri senator said, he is considering placing a "meaningful civil rights bill" as an amendment to legislation pending before the Senate.

This is the same tactic Senate Majority Leader Johnson of Texas reportedly is considering in order to get a moderate civil rights bill passed.

Hennings made his threat after a day-long session of the Senate Judiciary Committee in which Southerners continued to stall action and refused his request to meet every day.

The Dixie members of the committee spent most of the day arguing in favor of a "right-to-work" amendment to the bill.

AMENDMENT LOSES

However, before the committee quit for the day, this amendment by Sen. McClellan (D-Ark) finally came to a vote and was defeated by a 7-4 vote.

The McClellan amendment would have authorized the Civil Rights Commission to investigate alleged deprivations of the right to work because of strikes or picket lines.

Presumably this amendment received only the votes of the four Southern members—Chairman James O. Eastland (D-Miss) and Sens. McClellan, Ervin (D-NC), and Johnston (D-SC).

DELAY BLOCKED

The Northerners also blocked a move by Ervin to postpone all further consideration of the bill until the House acts on a moderate bill before the rules committee.

At one time there were signs that the committee members might be trying to get down to a "cards on the table" attempt for some sort of agreement, when staff members were excluded from the proceedings. However, no agreement was reached.

The committee adjourned until next Friday when it will take up another amendment by Ervin to knock out a provision of a bottled-bill extending the life of the Civil Rights Commission for two years.

Ervin's amendment is expected to be voted down and then other amendments will be considered.

Arctic Control a Must, Sub Officer Says Here

By FRANK WELLS

A young man who has traded ice cream for polar bear meat within snowball distance of the North Pole Monday told members of Atlanta's Rotary Club that we must maintain our dominance of the Arctic both for defense and for possible submarine trade routes.

He is Lt. Davis S. Boyd, USN, engineering reactor officer of the U.S.S. Skate, top-of-the-world touring submarine.

The trade for the polar bear meat came when the Skate surfaced last year near the International Geophysical Year's Arctic station Alpha, floating on the polar ice near the North Pole. "The IGY men got the best of the trade," Lt. Boyd said, "We could not eat the bear meat."

Lt. Boyd emphasized the importance of the polar regions. "There is the possibility of submarine trade routes across the top of the world from the Pacific to the Atlantic oceans," he said. "Then we must maintain our radar early warning systems there."

The Skate proved during the period of the thickest ice last March that submarines can surface in the Arctic anytime for weather observations or rocket firings.

"We hunted for the thinnest spots and then pushed up through the ice," Lt. Boyd said. "During the summer, there are open leads of water as the ice moves. In the winter the ice cracks but it freezes again almost immediately. But the ice is thinner."

Lt. Boyd said underwater exploration of the ice pack depended on the "absolute reliability" of the submarine's power plant. The Skate is powered with an atomic reactor.

The young engineering officer said it was also imperative to have an air purifying machine which would continue working at all times.

"The other big difficulty which had to be overcome was a means to navigate," Lt. Boyd said. He explained that common instruments used by seafaring men

Railway Express

Asks Rate Jump

Of $88 Million

NEW YORK (AP)—Railway Express Agency said it asked the Interstate Commerce Commission Monday to approve promptly an 88 million dollar a year increase in parcel post rates.

A company brief filed with the ICC in Washington said the boost would pave the way for further rate increases which would eliminate the 166 million dollars the post office loses on parcel post annually.

The increase would also give private package carriers a chance "to compete more effectively with the Post Office department for the package traffic," the Railway Express statement declared.

The post office originally asked the ICC for parcel post increases in April 1957. It proposed rate schedules last February. The ICC has been holding hearings on the request.

Dr. Sellers Signs Vet Home Contract

Approval Assures U.S. Cash For Milledgeville Institution

Health department director Dr. T. F. Sellers Monday signed a contract for operating the Georgia Veterans Home in Milledgeville, apparently ending a squabble of several days over his failure to sign.

Gov. Vandiver and Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler had signed the contract in May, but it could not become effective until Dr. Sellers' signature was affixed.

The contract makes the state eligible to receive about $110,000 a year in federal funds, which must be matched by the state for operating the home.

Gov. Vandiver said earlier Monday he had suggested to Dr. Sellers that he not sign it until all questions about the contract had been resolved.

Dr. Sellers met with Wheeler,

Vandiver and other officials Monday afternoon and apparently cleared up the questions. He signed the contract shortly after the conference.

Vandiver Would Greet Khrushchev

Gov. Vandiver stopped short of officially inviting Soviet Premier Khrushchev to Georgia Monday, but he said he would always be happy to have any "foreigner see what a wonderful state Georgia is."

He said he would be willing to welcome Khrushchev "in my official capacity" if he should decide to come South.

Atlanta's Mayor Hartsfield and others have invited the Russian chief of state to visit points in Georgia while he is in the United States.

Vandiver said he thinks that if Khrushchev "sees the strength of this country—and that although we are divided on domestic issues, we are united on matters of national security—he would be hesitant to start a war."

DeKalb Digest Up 29 Million

DeKalb County's net tax digest shows a record $29,183,885 increase over last year's digest, W. Fred Nash, tax commissioner, said Monday.

Nash said the digest showed a $499,572,220 gross and a $386,787,195 net evaluation of real and personal property in the county. The gross digest is $33,806,655 more than last year's.

Homestead exemptions deducted from the gross evaluation yield the net digest, Nash explained. The tax rate is set after the digest is enrolled by the state.

GOP-Southern 'Deal' on Rights, Labor Denied by Landrum and Co-Sponsor

Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—Representatives Landrum (D-Ga) and Griffin (R-Mich) Monday night hotly denied there is any deal between Republicans and Southern Democrats on labor legislation and the civil rights issue.

The question was asked on a nationally televised debate on the eve of a battle in the House of Representatives on labor reform bills.

President Eisenhower and most Republicans and Southern Democrats are supporting a bill by Landrum and Griffin to curb labor racketeering.

Landrum and Griffin appeared Monday night on an NBC program entitled "The Great Debate" with Rep. Shelley (D-Calif), sponsor of a milder bill labor wants, and Rep. Udall (R-Ariz) who favors a labor committee bill tougher than Shelley's but less stringent than the Landrum-Griffin bill.

Martin Agronsky, moderator of the program, asked Landrum and Griffin if there is a "quid pro quo" arrangement whereby Southern Democrats would back the tough bill in return for Republican support against a harsh civil rights bill. Such a deal has been strongly rumored on Capitol Hill.

However, Landrum said that is "absolutely false." And Griffin said he supports President Eisenhower's civil rights program and that his and Landrum's labor bill has "absolutely nothing to do with civil rights."

The Landrum-Griffin bill would provide criminal penalties for violation or threatened violation of union members' right to vote and speak out on union affairs. It would make such violations or threats a federal offense.

In debating the merits of their respective bills on the television program, Landrum and Griffin predicted their bill will pass, and so did Udall and Shelley forecast victory for theirs.

All four of the principals contended their bills would curb labor abuses, but Landrum and Griffin said their plan is the minimum to do this, while Udall argued for a compromise as "the art of the possible" in legislation.

HEALTH and HAPPINESS

By DR. SARA JORDAN

Keep Health Habits The Very Best

Most healthy human beings want to live as long as possible. But the question often occurs to these healthy people: What can I do to accomplish that goal? Are my habits as life-preserving as they could be? Am I doing the kind of work that is conducive to long life; if not, should I change my job to help myself live longer?

We have to recognize that the second disease killer in this country is cancer. We also know that the earliest possible detection and the removal of it by surgery or radiation offers our only hope to combat it.

But the greatest killer of all is disease in the heart and circulatory system. It is hoped that future victims of these diseases may be detected and forewarned in time to prevent these deaths. In the meantime, habits of life are most important as we all know. The weight problem—hacked as it is—still must be constantly borne in mind by those who put on a couple of pounds after a feast and take them off again only after a famine. If the famine does not follow the feast there is likely to be the insidious accumulation of worthless fat that discourages that wonderful circulatory system of ours, in its effort to take care of such an ungrateful host.

Rest is essential in all forms, interspersed into the day with an after lunch nap, a good night's sleep, a relaxing weekend in these days when weekends are usually at least a day and a half in length and, finally, as much vacation as the boss and your conscience will let you take.

And then we have exercise! Some of us think of exercise as good only for the development of our muscle strength. It does keep legs, arms, and the waistline in good condition; there is no question of that. But it has other precious values, too.

Exercise sends blood through the vessels of the brain at an increased rate of speed, thus giving it more chance for nourishment and efficiency. If you don't believe in that aspect of its value, try a golf game or a swim or a tennis match the next time you awaken feeling tired and low in spirit! After such exercise the world will look brighter than you believe it was, and you will challenge it with more spirit than you thought you had.

Our conclusion, as we ponder this problem of staying as long as possible in this vale of both joy and tears, is that our maxim should be to live as healthfully as possible in whatever job and in whatever circle we find ourselves.

(Dr. Jordan cannot undertake to answer personal questions by mail. However, questions of general interest relating to health will be discussed from time to time in this column.)

If James Fenimore Cooper had written "The Last of the Mohicans" as a newspaper story, the office the next day would have been besieged by Mohicans. All you have to do to find out how many of something is left is run a story saying: "This is the last of the..."

I called Jim Davidson's weekly newspaper, The Cleveland Courier, the last of the Georgia hand-set newspapers. Well, 'taint so. Clifford A. Beebe of the Clay County Progress, Hayesville, N.C., writes that "there is at least one other hand-set paper in north Georgia. . . . The North Georgia News of Blairsville. . . ."

Honest, I just forgot it. The North Georgia News is published by Harold R. West, and he puts out a good 6-column, 6-page paper, printed two pages at a time on an old Babcock drum cylinder press.

Harold has been in these columns before. He is one of those spark-plugging a memorial to Georgia's mountain poet, Byron Herbert Reece.

Incidentally, Mr. Beebe's paper from North Carolina is also partially hand-set.

The way Georgians are sentimental, there probably never is the last item of anything. Somebody is probably preserving a stage coach and getting it ready for a regularly scheduled run.

"Thank You, Mr. Commissioners!"

Miss Annie Cook, a retired school teacher, kept after the Fulton County Commission until she got her road paved. Now with most folks this would have been the end of it, but not with Miss Annie. Every year on the anniversary of the paving of her road, she shows up at the county commissioners' meeting and says, "I just came down again to thank you for paving my road. I want to tell you how much I enjoy it and appreciate it."

And that's the way to get most anything done.

Interest in Grandpa's War Records Mounts

Folks out at the State Archives say that the inquiries from people who want to check up on Grandpa's Civil War record have just about doubled since publicity started on the centennial commemoration of the war.

"And we expect that this is just the start of the snowball which will be building," Lu Waldron said. Lu helps you find Grandpa's name on the muster rolls.

The federal government is sending back to Georgia all the Confederate records belonging to the state. The archivists expect them to arrive about Oct. 1. "That will increase our work load," Lu said. "People had been getting some information from Washington that they'll start getting from us."

If you want to find out about Grandpa, go out to Rhodes Center armed with all the information you can lay your hands on. If you know the county he enlisted from, his unit number, or whom he served with, it will all help in finding out exactly what happened to him.

You have to look the information up yourself. The staff at the archives helps as much as they can, but you have to do the looking.

SHARON, Ireland (UPI)—Three Pan American World Airways planes on their way to New York were held up for a total of four hours Monday after someone called the airport and said there was a bomb aboard one of them. 16 Syrian Reds Renounce Party

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—Sixteen prominent Syrian Communists publicly renounced the party in a joint press statement Monday.

The decision was viewed as another victory for the rebels in the anti-party revolt begun a month ago by Rafik Rida, former Central Committee member for Syria and the Lebanon. Rida accused the party of "betraying pan-Arab aspirations."

The 16 accused the party of treason against all major Arab issues.

Atlanta detectives Monday signed affidavits in Fulton Criminal Court charging Mrs. Margaret Hodges and her two young sons with operating a lottery, Sol. John I. Kelley said.

They also signed accusations charging Mrs. Hodges with contributing to the delinquency of the two sons, both of whom are minors.

Mrs. Hodges, 50, was charged with six counts of lottery and the contributing to delinquency cases, Kelley said. Paul Hodges, 20, also was charged with six counts and Albert Jackson Hodges with one count of lottery.

SIGNED BY OFFICERS

The affidavits for the necessary accusations to bring Mrs. Hodges and her sons to trial on the misdemeanor charges were signed by arresting officers, Capt. R. E. Little Jr., Sgt. M. W. Blackwell and Dets. W. B. Blackwell and J. F. Inman.

They were among the squad of officers who arrested Mrs. Hodges and her sons after a raid last Tuesday at a residence in northwest Atlanta.

Sol. Kelley said the officers signed necessary affidavits to charge the offenses in either six one-count accusations or in one six-count accusation.

EVIDENCE STUDIED

Evidence obtained by the officers in the raid is being studied to determine the best way to handle the case, Kelley explained.

If the officials decide to proceed on single accusations charging six lottery offenses, they might run afoul of recent state appellate court rulings on lottery cases where they overruled several multiple-count lottery convictions.

The courts held, in effect, in those cases that evidence must be sufficient to prove operation of a lottery in Fulton County on each date alleged.

And in another case, the courts ruled that if a person is tried on a general accusation which does not make the date of the crime a specific averment, but merely covers a two-year period, there could be only one lottery conviction for offenses which occurred during that two years.

In the Hodges cases, dates would be made a specific averment so a separate case could be made for each day of the alleged operation, if the evidence will sustain them.

DATES LISTED

The officers accuse Mrs. Hodges — whose arrest made the 41st time police have taken her into custody — of operating a lottery July 27-31 and on Aug. 4.

Mrs. Hodges presently is being held in lieu of $120,500 bond, which was set by Atlanta Municipal Court Judge James Webb. The bond is the highest set in the court's history. Paul Hodges is being held in lieu of $6,000 bond.

Albert Hodges has posted bond of $1,000 on the lottery charge and $1,450 on traffic charges booked against him as a result of a chase by police from the residence where his mother was arrested.

Officers said when they broke down the door of the residence, Mrs. Hodges and Paul Hodges were stuffing lottery paraphernalia down a toilet.

C. BIRNEY CURRY FAMILY ROYALLY WELCOMED AS ATLANTA RESIDENTS
Mrs. Curry, Patricia, Malora, Susan, Mr. Curry and Turner

Annie Lou Hardy Red Carpet Rolled Out For C. B. Curry Family

An interesting family of newcomers who have had "red-carpet" treatment since their arrival from Macon a few weeks ago are Mr. and Mrs. C. Birney Curry and their children, who are now settled at 2919 Mornington Dr. The family includes three daughters, Susan, Malora and Patricia, who range in age from 7 years to 3 months, and a son, Turner, who is 5. Mr. Curry, an architect, has opened offices at 599 Plum St.

Mrs. Curry is the former Betty Lou Turner of Baltimore. The accompanying picture of her and her family was made in June when she won her degree from Wesleyan.

"I really finished my course in February," said pretty, dark-haired Mrs. Curry, "but I did not get my degree until commencement."

Marriage interrupted her college career in her junior year, and she went back in September, 1957, to get an A.B. in history and government. She plans to work toward a Ph.D. later.

Mrs. Warren M. Curry and Mrs. Jack B. Curry gave a brunch to introduce her to their Atlanta friends, and next weekend the Jack Currys will entertain at the Atlanta Yacht Club for the newcomers. Yesterday Mrs. Frank J. Bull was hostess at a swimming party at the Cherokee Club for Susan, who is just back from a visit to her grandparents, the J. Walter Turners of Baltimore, and tomorrow Mrs. Ralph Clement, Mrs. Al Roach and Mrs. Jack Ford will give a luncheon for Mrs. Curry at the same club.

Mrs. Hagood Clarke, Mrs. Jack Pierson and Mrs. Walter Smith have also been luncheon hostesses for Mrs. Curry. On Saturday Mr. and Mrs. William Stubbs entertained at cocktails and afterward, Mr. and Mrs. Curry were dinner guests of the Robert Battles.

A GALA HOUSE PARTY held forth at the Biltmore during the weekend when Mrs. Howell Hanson entertained for her grandchildren, William III, Sparky, Danny and Laura Frances Candler of Orlando. Completing the list of young guests, who took full advantage of the Biltmore's new swimming pool and snack bar, were Flora Gaines of Dalton, cousin of the Candler children, and Bobby Shriver of Orlando.

The Candler arrived on Friday with their mother, Mrs. William Candler Jr., from Dalton, where they visited relatives during Mr. Candler's absence on a fishing trip to Canada. He returned on Saturday with Henry Heinz from Kenora, Ontario, in the latter's plane.

EXPECTED FRIDAY for a week's visit are Mr. and Mrs. John Shields Jr., and their children, John III and Christine, of Waycross. They will be guests of Mrs. Shields' parents, the R. J. Thiesens of Inman Circle.

ROBERT WILMERS of New York and Brussels is the guest this week of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sams and Miss Mary Sams at their Huntington road home.

Miss Sams and Mr. Wilmers spent the weekend as guests of the latter's Exeter classmate, Philip Southall, in Florence, Alabama.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Robinson returned yesterday from Ponte Vedra where they were guests for the past ten days at Ponte Vedra Inn. They had as their guests at the beach their granddaughter, Babs Storm, and her close friend, Margaret Hutchison.

JERRY NEY is back home after a two-week vacation at Daytona Beach where he was a guest at the Thunderbird Motel.

THE RICHARD TROTTERS and their sons, Michael and Richard Jr., are homeward bound today from Washington, D.C., where they attended the wedding on Saturday of Dr. George Bray to Martha Bardenhagen of Portland, Ore.

The ceremony took place at Christ Lutheran Church, Bethesda, Md., with Michael serving as usher. Dr. Bray, a magna cum laude graduate of Harvard Medical School and a U.S. Army captain, is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Trotter. His bride, a graduate of John Hopkins University, is employed by the American Red Cross.

A SUMMER-LONG FAMILY reunion is in progress at Lorelee, the Herbert L. Reed cottage on Lake Allatoona.

Mrs. Edna Waer has just returned to her home in Passaic, N.J., after two weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Reed and Mr. Reed. Now vacationing at the cottage are Mrs. Reed's sister, Mrs. William Palmer, Mr. Palmer and their three daughters of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Herbert Snoop Jr., of New Jersey, nephew of the Reeds, is also their guest, and on Aug. 16 he will be joined for two weeks at the lake by his parents, his sister, Jane, and his brother, Bobby.

DIANA CHURCHILL, daughter of the Richard Churchills of 3295 Matheson Dr., left during the weekend for a visit to her grandmother, Mrs. Elsie Churchill of New York City. Later Diana will finish her two-week sojourn with a visit to relatives in Maine.

THE N. E. BOSWELL family is vacationing in widely scattered points. Mrs. Boswell and her daughter, Ann O'Hara, are relaxing at the Castle Harbour in Bermuda, while another daughter, Michael, is spending three weeks in Arcadia, Calif., where she is a guest of those former Atlantans, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Cottraux, and their daughter, Jeanie.

Bar Mitzvah

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander W. Resin announce the Bar Mitzvah of their son, Richard Paul, on Saturday, Aug. 29, at 9 a.m. at the Ahavath Achim Synagogue. A Kiddush will follow the service.

The following day, Sunday, Aug. 30, Mr. and Mrs. Resin will hold open house for their son at their home at 4500 Mt. Paran Parkway, NW. The calling hours are from 3 to 5 o'clock.

By HARRIETTE WEINSTEIN
Atlanta's preschool children can't READ the comic strip "Peanuts"—but day nurseries agree that the youngsters unknowingly LIVE the lives of little peanuts.

"Reading the comic strip is just like being in the nursery with the children," laughed Mrs. M. W. Holcomb, a registered nurse and owner of one of Atlanta's day nurseries.

"We have many children like Linus, dragging their blankets around with them everywhere they go," she added. "One of them dragged his blanket through an ant bed and it was just crawling with ants. But he still held on."

Linus in The Constitution comic strip "Peanuts" has accomplished such feats as playing baseball—still keeping his blanket in tow. The blanket is his "security." And, like the nicotine fiend, he tries most unsuccessfully to "break the habit."

HOST OF LINUSES

Nurseries report a host of Linuses—girls and boys who walk in with their blankets at 7 a.m. and don't let go of them throughout the day.

"If one of them happens to lay the blanket down and forgets it, he starts to yell as soon as he remembers. And he keeps yelling until we find HIS blanket, too," said one of the operators.

Another "Peanuts" character, ter, Lucy, is president of the fussybuds of America. Chief focal point of her domination and "constructive criticism" is poor old Charlie Brown. But anyone who comes near enough often enough is apt to feel her whip-lash tongue.

"It seems that children of intelligent parents—especially girls who have younger sisters—more easily become the Lucy around here," added Mrs. Holcomb. "And we have several who fit in the type quite well."

LUCYS, TOO

Another nursery director, Mrs. Hattie Williams, added that the Lucys in real life just as in the comic strip usually boss someone younger than they are or some child with a weakness.

"And children can spot a weakness much quicker than an adult."

She added that a Lucy feels a little inferior and doesn't want the Charlie Browns to get ahead of her.

Charlie Brown is the round-faced, ill-fated "hero" of the cartoon strip who can't get ahead for losing. He's the only boy in the world to have lost 10,000 checker games in a row, the most unlucky baseball manager yet and the most patient fellow to ever await a kind word or friendly smile to no avail.

"You notice that Charlie Brown is always trying to do something. And Lucy always stops him. She doesn't want him to get one step ahead of her. Anyone who is familiar with children knows the man who writes 'Peanuts' really knows his child psychology."

LARGE ODDS

But the Charlies in Atlanta like the Charlie in the cartoon strip sometime "prevail over overwhelming odds."

"There are quite a few children who get bossed around," said one nursery school owner. "But then the Charlies will surprise you. They will get the best of the Lucys in the most unexpected ways. And the Lucys cry the hardest when they are beaten."

However, one of the most adored and most profound observers of the Peanuts set was unavailable for comment or duplication.

He's Snoopy, the pup. Atlanta Snoopys have not taught an adult to read their minds.

Annual Tea Set Aug. 13

The Atlanta Opt-Mrs. Club will hold its annual tea on Thursday, Aug. 13, at the home of Mrs. Sam North, 3806 North Stratford Rd., NE, from 2 to 6 p.m.

Mrs. James H. Aldredge, president, will be hostess.

Tobe Says New Fad In Sweaters

The brushed wool sweater that looks like a shaggy dog is the new darling of the college crowd. It's been the thing with the boys at the Ivy League prep schools for the past year, so it was inevitable that sooner or later the girls would take it up, too.

These brushed sweaters are both pullover and cardigan in type—the pullover considered the swankiest by the young crowd, the cardigan the more useful. As for colors, the demand is for all the dull shades—such as the "no-colors," natural burlap, and the whole gamut of heather shades, of course.

CAREER GIRL

A Girl's Job Success Is What She Makes It

By JUNE WILSON

"Dear Miss Wilson:

First of all, let me assure you that I think women are wonderful. My mother was one, my wife is another and I have two growing daughters. I even go along so far as to agree that women have a definite place in the business world.

"However, in all honesty I must also say that not all women who work are 'career girls' as you put it: some women just work . . . and do as little of that as possible, and their number is legion. In my business organization, for every valuable woman employee there are at least four whose greatest accomplishment (and the only discernible ambition) is waiting for 5 o'clock. How now?"

"—Disenchanted Employer"

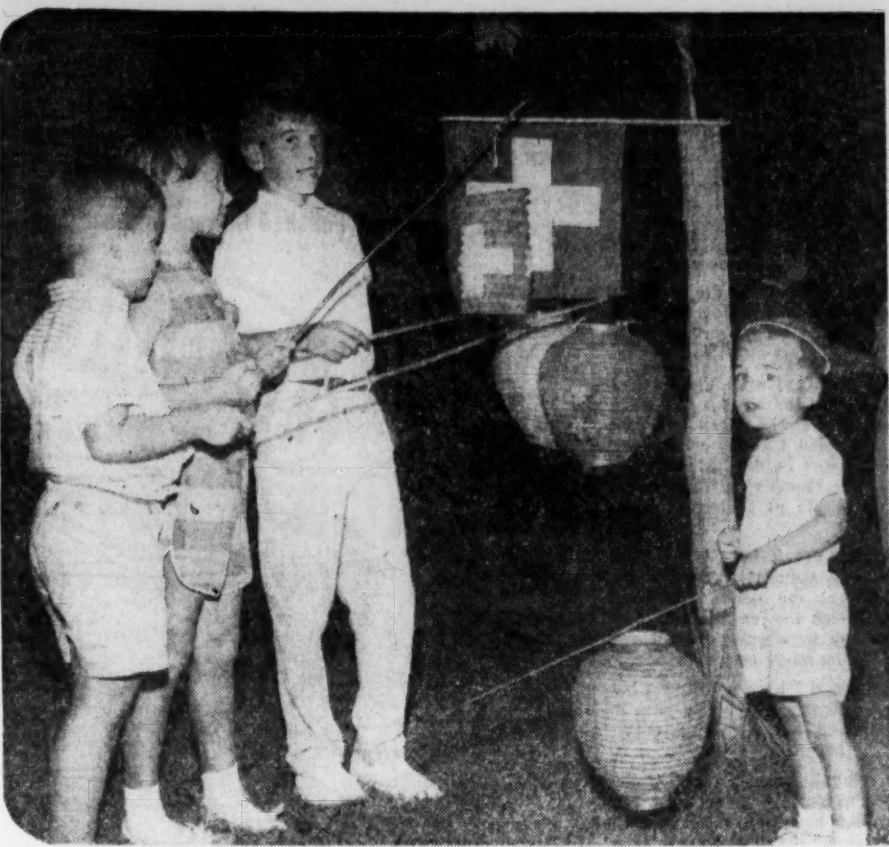

To "Disenchanted" we can only say that he is right. And the responsibility for what a woman puts into her job rests squarely upon the girl herself. It has to do with the things she is, the things she wants, and the things she has. If she is honest, wants success, and has self-respect she will not flinch time for which she is paid to amuse herself when there is work to be done nor be suddenly unavailable when the big clock shows a quarter to five. This is dishonest, and it is not always petty theft. It is also the way to professional suicide.

Few jobs require either eternal vigilance or perpetual motion. Even in those which do there should and must be a break to refresh the mind. From this fertile soil has grown the coffee break, and there are few now who still argue with its wisdom.

"There's been so little for Sally to do that now our slump is over she seems offended when I ask her to do something," says her employer wondrously. Sally has fallen into habit. She has let herself believe that the world is buttered on both sides . . . on the one with salary checks and the other with her own good time. But the time her salary check buys is not her own any more than the dress she paid for still belongs to the shop.

It is fine for the working girl to make it to the office on time in the morning; it is also commendable that she respect the limits of the lunch hour, and wait until the 5-o'clock whistle sets her free. But it is better, more comfortable and more fruitful that the career-minded girl look upon her working time as her job—not an eight-hour day Fate has assigned and left it to her to see that it is spent doing just what her job classification specifies in black and white.

Job classifications, invariably, carry a number. The career girl knows her attitude to be as important as her accomplishments, for by it her employer and her fellow workers get HER number. This is what "Disenchanted Employer" means. What's YOUR number?

The bride, who has been residing in New York for the past two years, attended the University of Kansas City and the Kansas City Art Institute.

The bridegroom attended Howard College in Birmingham and was graduated from the University of Alabama. For the past eight years he has been a resident of Atlanta, where he is associated with the Olin-Mathieson Chemical Corp.

She and Ike Are Owners Of Famous China Horses

By YOLANDE GWIN
Birthdays are fun, regardless of age.

And one of the best things about them is the nice little collection of presents the family and friends send.

Mrs. Robert Bunzl has many reasons for being thrilled over her recent birthday and one of her gifts.

She now owns one of those exquisite china figurines of the famous "Lipizzaner" from the Spanish Riding Academy in Vienna. Another owned by President Eisenhower was received by him several months ago.

"When we (Mr. Bunzl) returned from our trip West, there was my birthday present from my brother-in-law Oscar Radner in Vienna," said Mrs. Bunzl. "I was delighted to have the figurine because it not only is representative of my country, but it is so historical. I shall treasure it always for that as well as for the sentimental value."

FAMOUS BREED

The Lipizzaner is the famous breed of horses at the Imperial Spanish Riding Academy which was founded in the 16th century by Prince Eugene of Savoy. The horses are put through their famous paces at regular performances with riders wearing the colorful habits which have been a part of the ceremony for years. During World War I the horses were taken to secret quarters for safety. The Lipizzaners are bred at the Academy which is adjacent to the Imperial Palace.

In addition to this unusual piece of art, there are some additional conversational balls which the Bunzls can toss around these days. They are just back from an extended tour of Colorado and Wyoming where they enjoyed several outdoor musical shows.

SAW FRIENDS

"We saw performances of 'Baby Doe' and 'Fledermaus' at Central City, the interesting and famous old mining town in the Colorado mountains. We saw two of our friends of the Metropolitan Opera Co., Ossi Hawkins and Martha Lipton, both of whom asked about Atlanta and spoke of how much they loved our city.

"I think the highlight of our trip was the excellent performance of 'The Girl of the Golden West' which we actually saw in the midst of the golden West. It took place in the immense arena of the Red Rock Theater which is built between two gigantic rocks overlooking Denver. The night we went there was really a star studded sky. Eleanor Steber was the leading lady and was widely acclaimed by the more than 10,000 people."

AUSTRIAN CONSUL

The Atlanta couple—he is Austrian consul here—did the usual sightseeing through Yellowstone Park where they stayed at the Tackson Lake Lodge in the Grand Teton National Park.

Howard Baby

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Howard of Whiteman Air Force Base, Kansas City, Mo., announce the birth of a son, Scott Alan on Aug. 6. Mrs. Howard is the former Sue Wood of Atlanta.

"We took a 30-mile trip in a rubber boat down the Snake River where the scenery was beautiful. I suppose the most adventurous part of our trip was the ride in a small plane. We really felt like Wild West pioneers for this new frontier line took us through lowering mountain ranges and we landed four times on short narrow runways right in the middle of prairies. It was a five-hour flight from Jackson to Denver and sometimes a bit frightening, but the pilot told us, 'We'll get you back alive!' And he did."

Brigitte Bardot Sets Pace For Young Fashions Abroad

By PHILLIS LEE LEVIN

Copyright, The New York Times Co., 1959

PARIS—The most influential fashion leader in Europe did not show at the recent Paris collections for fall and winter. This was not surprising, for she is a film star, not a dress designer. Her name is Brigitte Bardot.

From Edinburgh to Aix-En-Provence and from Geneva to Monte Carlo, thousands of 20-year-olds cling to one design—the star's favorite. This is the skirt and skirt worn with a steep leather belt that is buckled a centimeter short of suffocation.

The skirt is bolstered by petticoats that are so bouffant they make a ballerina's tutu look like a sack. The skirt skims the knee and what follows are bare, suntanned legs—the longer the better—shod in flattish wedge-soled leather mules.

Although the shirtwaist idea is not new to America, the slant certainly is. It has about as much to do with the Gibson Girl or Ann Fogarty as the can-can has with the waltz.

Still another American fashion has wandered from the old homestead. It is Le Blue Jean, which looks a bit sleeker after its stay abroad. The jeans that are made in Europe are narrower and shorter than their American cousins, which also are imported here.

But both seem to be the favorite mountain climbing. This lounging, sight seeing costume of Europeans.

For Ants!

DEAR GEORGE:

Do you know of anything good for ants, roaches and other small bugs?

DEAR HOUSEWIFE:

Most people use garbage. It is inexpensive and nutritious. Variety can be added, particularly on holidays, by sprinkling little bits of molasses cookies around the house. Roaches, particularly, love molasses cookies and if you tip-toe out quietly at night you can watch them clapping their little hands in glee. Although, personally, I think you would enjoy a dog much more.

Love's Fine, But No Man's Worth
Keeping Shoes on All Summer

It's not that I don't sympathize with young love. My heart goes out to every little boy and girl caught up, moon-eyed and palpitating, in that rosy fever. I even remember dimly how it was. At least I remember the sting of freckle cream and the unaccustomed pinch of shoes in the summertime the year I fell in love for the first time. He was an older man of 16 and I can't remember what he looked like but I remember with painful clarity how I talked my mother into letting me have a kinky permanent on the premise that curly hair was irresistible, even on a knobby-kneed freckle-faced lady of 11.

He resisted it all right. (He was in love with an older woman of 18.) But I aged a lot that summer. I knew suffering and I learned a few things, among them that hardly any man is worth the sacrifice of keeping on your shoes all summer. My confidence in permanent waves was permanently shaken, too. But beyond that the experience is something I prefer to pass over lightly and forget about.

That's probably why the advent of Love among my children makes me nervous and uncomfortable, particularly when it gets all star-crossed, as, of course, it must. I have the elderly person's conviction that if love doesn't make you happy you should have no truck with it. If it makes you miserable, I tell them stoutly, be done with it.

And it made her miserable. I caught her weeping over a photograph. She went to bed without any supper and later in the evening I found her wakeful, expending ink and energy on a tear-blobbed diary page. She was beginning to hang around the mailbox like a lonely little puppy around his late master's grave and my patience was running out. I had stopped saying, "Never mind, darling, it'll be all right," and started acting snappish about her neglected chores.

At that point an invitation came from a friend who lives at the beach, asking her and her sister to come to a house party. Bring an evening dress, the note said, because there'll be a dance.

"I don't want to go," she said morosely. "I hate having fun."

"She'll never dance again!" her sister said dramatically.

Instead of answering back she simply ducked her head and a tear slid out the corner of her eye.

"I hate Love!" I cried shrewishly and went and packed her evening dress myself. They went off but I had the distinct impression I was waving at a tumbrel headed for the guillotine as I saw them go.

They stopped off to visit their grandmother on the way and after a few days, remembering the bowed head and the teary eyes, I decided I better call up and see if my child was in the last stages of melancholia. The mother of her young hostess at the house party answered the phone.

"Oh, the girls aren't here," she said. "They've all gone swimming. They had a wonderful time at the dance and liked their dates so much they're all booked up for a week. They were going to call you and ask you if they might stay over."

They did call and I gave permission but I was a little jolted by the happy note in her voice. "Mother, we've met the cutest boys . . ." she began.

The only thing I can say about young love is that I'm surprised that it killed Juliet instead of her mother. Tragic as that story ended, it sure saved Mrs. Montague and Mrs. Capulet from getting cricks in their necks trying to keep up with the changing wind.

FAMILY TEAM—Wayne Coppege and his sister, Jean, admire the model of a vessel as John Albright of the local recruiting office familiarizes them with Navy terms. The Forest Park teen-agers enlisted in the Navy the same day, were sworn in on WSB-TV's Today in Georgia show, and both departed August 10 for basic training. Jean will go to Bainbridge, Md., for nine weeks, while her brother will see his first duty at Great Lakes. Their father, J. F. Coppege, is a retired Navy veteran.

Homemaking Teachers Gather
For Annual Meeting Aug. 14-15

Georgia high school homemaking teachers will meet Friday and Saturday, Aug. 14-15, at Lake Jackson for their annual conference.

Principal speaker for the meet will be Mrs. Elizabeth Force, developer of a course in family living for young people.

Mrs. Force, a family life consultant for the American Social Hygiene Council, will speak on "Helping Young People Develop Values for Effective Family Living."

Approximately 300 homemaking teachers will attend the session at Lake Jackson.

Several other speakers are also on the program.

Dr. Barbara Chandler, dean of students at Georgia State College for Women, will speak on the importance of a functional guidance program in high school. M. S. McQuaid, Moultrie High School principal, will speak on the contribution of the homemaking teacher to the school guidance program. Both of these talks are scheduled Friday.

Other program speakers include Miss Elizabeth Parker, Georgia Power Co. home service director; Mrs. Margaret Roper of Waycross, assistant state supervisor of the school lunch program; Mrs. Doe Harden, Brooks County homemaking teacher; Mrs. Billie Kevell, Southeastern Fair director of special activities; Dr. Mary Speirs, dean of the school of home economics at the University of Georgia; Miss Frances Roberts, Chamblee homemaking teacher; Miss Virginia Ware, home and family life consultant for Chatham County schools; and Miss Ruth Maynard, instructor in home management at GSCW.

A fashion show displaying the "Bishop Method" of tailoring is also on the program with those who have studied in one of the three Bishop Workshops modeling dresses, suits and coats.

Dr. Allene Cross, chairman of home economics education at the University of Georgia, will make a report on the curriculum study concerning what is being taught in home economics and ways to improve the curriculum.

Mrs. J. M. Barber, state adviser for the Future Homemakers, will be official hostess to the conference.

Miss Inez Wallace, state supervisor of homemaking of the Georgia Vocational Assn., will preside at one of the sessions.

Approach Study of Bible Without Preconceptions

QUESTION: Some people say we should not take a critical attitude toward the Bible. How can one be intellectually honest and not do so? Are we to swallow the whole thing without examining it?—Student (Name withheld.)

ANSWER: There is a form of Biblical criticism which starts with certain preconceived ideas and which seeks to interpret the Bible in the light of these presuppositions. For instance, if one rejects the miraculous and the supernatural, one will reject these elements of the whole written revelation from God.

One can approach the Bible with a cold rationalistic attitude or one can do so with reverence and the desire to hear God speak. I have a friend, a physician, who says there is a difference between the attitude of a scientist dissecting a dead body in a dissecting hall and that of the surgeon who operates on a living person in the operating room. The Bible should be approached with the assurance that here we have God-breathed literature and that it is our privilege and joy to find out what He has to say. Try studying the Bible with that attitude and you will find out for yourself.

ROARED IN '20s C. E. Stutz, Designer of Bearcat, Dies

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Charles E. Stutz, 76, designer of a pioneer sports car which helped put the roar in the roaring 20s, died Monday.

He built and widely raced the famed Stutz Bearcat—more for business than excitement, he said afterward.

"Racing in those days was the best form of advertising," Stutz told an interviewer several years ago. "If an automobile won a big race the customers were in the next day with a fistful of $100 bills. It was the quickest way to sell cars."

Stutz already was a well-known dirt track racing driver when he organized the Stutz Motor Car Co. in 1909 with a cousin, Harry C. Stutz. The firm put out passenger cars as well as the glamorous open-cockpit racing models which found favor with playboys of the flapper era.

The Union City, Ind., native was on the Indianapolis Speedway technical committee for more than 20 years.

Stutz came to Miami in 1940 after the depression ended manufacture of his cars.

Big Housing Firms Announce Merger

Knox Corp. of Thomson To Join National Homes

By JIM MONTGOMERY

The Knox Corp. of Thomson, Ga., the nation's third largest publicly owned prefabricated home manufacturer, Monday announced a merger with National Homes Corp. of Lafayette, Ind., said to be the largest prefabricated home builder in the world.

The merger, effective Tuesday, was approved by Knox stockholders and directors at a meeting in Thomson.

Directors of National Homes also approved the plan Monday, as well as the acquisition of four other home manufacturing companies—Thyer Manufacturing Corp. of Toledo, Ohio, and Collins, Miss.; W. G. Best Factory-Built Homes, Inc., Effingham, Ill.; Lester Brothers, Inc., Martinsville, Va., and Fairhill, Inc., Memphis, Tenn.

KNOX TO BE SUBSIDIARY

The Georgia firm, which started as a lumber company in Thomson 60 years ago, will operate as a wholly-owned subsidiary of National.

Peter S. Knox Jr. said there will be no changes in the company's general management, although its name has been changed from Knox Corp. to Knox Homes Corp. Knox said he will continue as president and, under terms of the merger agreement, will become a director of National Homes.

STOCK EXCHANGED

He said the merger was transacted through an exchange of stock, under which National will swap 65 shares of its class A common stock for each 100 shares of class A and class B common stock in the Knox Corp.—or a total of 325,000 National shares for the 500,000 outstanding Knox shares.

Knox said 70 per cent of the company's stock was still family owned, although the number of stockholders in the firm had risen to about 750 since its shares were first listed on the American Stock Exchange in 1957. Knox Corp.'s class A common rose $1.34 before the merger was announced. National's recent over-the-counter range has been from $22 to $24.

OPERATES LUMBER MILL

With headquarters and plant in Thomson, Knox has a lumber mill in Soperton and general sales offices in Atlanta. Also, in a previously unannounced acquisition it concluded on June 23 of this year the purchase of "of better than 90 per cent" of the outstanding common stock of American Homes, Inc., which has plants at Allentown, Pa., and Lumberton, N.C.

The company now employs about 500 persons in Georgia, Knox said Monday, and expects to increase that number soon in line with yet-to-be-announced expansion projects related to the merger.

In 1958 the Knox Corp. produced about 2,000 housing units—including mobile homes—and reported total sales of approximately $9 million.

BUILDS PREFAB HOUSES

One in a succession of companies growing out of a lumber company founded by Peter Knox Sr. in 1899, the Knox Corp. was incorporated in 1946 as a manufacturer of prefabricated houses. In addition, the company has been building mobile homes since 1955.

It will continue to serve primarily the market in the Southeast—Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee and the Carolinas.

As a result of the merger with Knox and the acquisition of the other companies Monday, National's sales estimated that its 1959 sales will rise to $100 million and that it will produce about 45,000 housing units—some 3.5 per cent of the single-family, nonfarm, privately financed homes built in the United States.

Group Flying Curbed For Many Executives

NEW YORK (AP)—"Two is company, three is a crowd, four is too many and five's not allowed."

Many U.S. corporations follow this old adage in setting limitations on the numbers of top executives they will allow to take airplane trips together, the National Industrial Conference Board reported Monday.

A board survey found 60 per cent of the 102 companies canvassed place restrictions on the numbers and ranks of top management men who can fly in the same plane.

The companies said they impose the rules as insurance against losing groups of key men in single plane crashes. Continental Can Co. last month lost eight middle management men when a company plane plunged into an Ohio wheat field.

Most firms, the board's survey showed, allow no more than two or three top executives to fly together.

Usually, the board added, these policies are unwritten rules. Only a few companies have formal written provisions.

Car Builders Closing Up To Retool

DETROIT (AP)—About all that is left of the 1959-model car year is the final production spurt of Ford and Chevrolet.

All other builders will close down this week or are already in the midst of model changeovers. Ford will run through August. Chevrolet has another week. Ford outbuilt Chevrolet, 35,965 to 34,500, last week, but Chevrolet remains almost 75,000 units head for the calendar year.

During the week Ford Division built its one millionth car of the calendar year, of which 48,855 have been Thunderbirds. Chrysler Corp. built its last cars at Evansville, Ind., and closed that plant permanently. It will be replaced by a new assembly plant at St. Louis.

Car production for the year totals 3,947,753 against 2,641,875 at this time last year. Truck production is 778,876 against 528,197.

Frisco Line Pleads Innocent

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Co. pleaded innocent Monday to charges of criminal violation of the Interstate Commerce Commission Act in its efforts to gain control of the Central of Georgia Railroad.

A two-count information filed in U.S. District Court last month charged Frisco with acquiring control of the Georgia line prior to March 1, 1956, without first obtaining ICC approval. Frisco reportedly spent $20 1/2 million buying up a majority of Central of Georgia stock.

The case has not been set for trial. Maximum penalty would be a $5,000 fine on each count.

Goodyear Hits Highs

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. set all-time records for sales and earnings in the first six months of this year, E. J. Thomas, board chairman, reported to directors Monday.

Net income of $40,646,386, or $3.75 a share, compared with $27,256,807, or $2.52 a share, a year ago. Sales of $812,750,506 compared with $648,031,308 in the first half of 1958.

The second quarter marked the highest sales and earnings level of any quarter in Goodyear's history. During this period all of Goodyear's three major competitors were shut down by strikes of from three to eight weeks duration.

Car Dealers Gloomy

DETROIT (AP)—Automotive News said Monday it has found a growing belief among new car dealers that because of the steel strike auto production might be slowed or halted after the first few 1960 models are built.

The auto makers have talked of large steel inventories. All have said they expect to enter volume production of their new models next month even though the steel strike, which began in mid-July, remains unsettled.

Retail Sales Steady

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Commerce department said Monday preliminary figures indicate that retail sales held about steady last month at $18,200,000,000. The July figure, virtually unchanged from June after seasonal factors are taken into account, was 9 per cent above July, 1958.

If you could only afford 3 stocks

The other day we asked our Research Staff this question: "If you could only afford to buy 3 stocks, which would you buy NOW?"

Since there are hundreds and hundreds of stocks listed on the various stock exchanges, this was no simple request! Yet it is our business to constantly study the performance and growth potentials of thousands of different issues, and pass this on to our clients. Every week we send our specific stock recommendations in our Weekly Forecast. But narrowing the list down to just 3 was not easy! Here are brief descriptions of each one finally selected:

(A) An established leader in the ethical drug field that could move rapidly with the recent introduction of several new products.

(B) A growth speculation in chemical, plastic and high energy fuel fields, still down nearly 25% from previous high.

(C) A little known, but very promising stock in the field of electronics and automation. Recent gains suggest further advancement.

ALL THIS FOR ONLY $1!

These "3 NEW STOCKS TO BUY NOW" are sent to you (also 6 LOW-PRICED STOCKS FOR A FAST MOVE) along with a 4 weeks' trial subscription to our Dow Theory Forecasts Investment Service—entirely for the cost of postage and handling ($1).
